Legislative Leaders Still Wrangling Over The Revenue Program

Governor Demands That Budget Be Balanced and Senator Fearon Insists on Appropriation of $6,000,000 For Highway Repairs.

Albany, N. Y., April 23 (AP)—Legislative leaders indicated today that the 1934 session of the legislature probably would not end until Wednesday at the very earliest as a result of the fight between Governor Lehman and Republican senate leader George R. Fearon over the governor's revenue program.

They were still as hopelessly deadlocked today as they were Saturday night when they gave up their efforts to iron out the tangle in an all night session.

Even if an agreement is reached on the revenue controversy, the leaders pointed out that several other important measures, which might have died without action, will now be taken up.

These include congressional reapportionment, permanent liquor control, special New York city tax measures, and relief for mortgage certificate holders.

Nevertheless, the revenue fight is still the real obstacle in the way of adjournment. Governor Lehman demands that the budget be balanced before the legislators go home and has indicated that he would call them back in special session if they do not provide sufficient revenue to take care of the $250,000,000 budget.

Senator Fearon, on the other hand, refuses to furnish the necessary votes for the governor's measures and insists that the legislature appropriate an additional $6,000,000 for highway repairs. He proposes to raise the funds for this by an increase in the inheritance tax, but Governor Lehman objects to this on the ground that the tak would not bring in any money for 18 months.

Democratic leader John J. Dunnigan, asked about the prospects for adjournment, said:

"There is no telling now. We may be here for days."

Brandt to Give His Views

An effort to determine whether the additional $6,000,000 is needed for highway repairs will be made this afternoon when Captain Arthur W. Brandt, state highway commissioner, appears before the Senate finance committee. The idea of having Brandt give his views on the question was Senator Dunnigan's, but was concurred in by Senator Fearon.

The result of this hearing may have some effect in straightening out the budget tangle.

Meanwhile, the Senate excise committee prepared to introduce its new permanent liquor control bill. In some quarters this is regarded as an almost hopeless move with the members impatient and trying to get away. The leaders are agreed upon the plan, but there is reported to be strong opposition to some features of the bill.

It is possible that the present temporary control system may be extended until February 1, 1935.

The proposals made by George W. Alger and Senator Thomas C. Desmond for new machinery to aid distressed guaranteed mortgage certificate holders still await action. One or both of the bills may be called up tonight. Senator Desmond said he would press for consideration of a compromise bill, containing provisions from the other two measures.

Mayor LaGuardia's proposal that New York city be given the authority to levy new taxes on its citizens is also scheduled to come up for a final vote in the Assembly tonight. The measure passed the Senate late Saturday.

Abandon Hope for Entombed Miners

Sarajevo, Yugoslavia, April 23 (AP)—Rescue workers abandoned all hope today of finding any survivors in the depths of the blast-wrecked Kakanj coal mines.

Officials included in a death estimate of 146 the 86 men still unaccounted for. Sixty bodies had been recovered. Fifteen miners escaped or were rescued.

It had been hoped some of the entombed men might be found in distant galleries, but when the bodies recovered last night were found to be charred and mutilated, rescue squads conceded the other miners trapped likewise died almost instantly.

Even the hope of recovering the remaining bodies faded as water welled up in the pit. Gas which overcame a number of diggers added to the hazards of rescue work.

FORMER MILTON MAN WAS KILLED BY A FALL

Milton, April 23.—Clyde C. Hyde, son of the late James Hyde and a former resident of Milton, was accidentally killed by a fall on Tuesday morning, April 17. Mr. Hyde was a contractor and builder and although no details of the accident have been received from his home in Brooklyn it is supposed that he fell while at work. He died in Trinity Hospital. Besides his wife he leaves one daughter and three sisters, Miss Anna Hyde of Milton and Mrs. N. J. Kniffen and Mrs. Fred Norton of Woodhaven, L. I. He was born in Milton and lived here until as a young man he moved to Brooklyn. He visited in Milton every summer and was at one time a member of the Milton Methodist Church.

5 Petitioned Van Etten Bridge Be Built Following Big Flood

Petition Stated Bridges Requested to be Rebuilt Were Public Bridges for More Than 20 Years—Supervisors Now Not Voting on Strict Party Lines—Witnesses Heard.

Several witnesses were sworn this morning on behalf of County Superintendent of Highways James F. Loughran in the Democratic removal proceedings being brought to remove Mr. Loughran from office.

Just prior to the noon recess a petition was admitted in evidence which contained the names of five residents of the town of Denning who on October 30, 1929, after a bad flood in the town, petitioned the construction of bridges over 25 feet in length by the county superintendent. The bridges named in that petition were the much discussed Van Etten bridge, John H. Brooks bridge, Dimmick bridge and the Buttermilk Falls bridge. That petition over the signature of five residents of the town stated that the bridges requested to be re-built by the county were bridges in public use for more than 20 years and were on public highways.

Supervisor Roy Davis asked whether the men who signed the petition were members of the town board or not and was told that this probably would be learned later from the testimony.

The paper was admitted as respondent's exhibit A-4, over the objection of County Attorney Arthur B. Ewig who is appearing as prosecuting officer in the case. The vote on the objection was 31 to 0 to over-rule the objection. Supervisor George had asked for the exhibit to be read before a vote was taken.

A marked change of heart was noticeable at the opening of the session. No longer is the vote 17 to 16 on objections. Since Supervisor Wright bolted the party vote and voted with the Republicans on the matter of dismissing one of the charges at the close of the complainant's case apparently a caucus has been held and the majority party, Democratic, is no longer voting solid for everything which Mr. Ewig advocates.

Sherman Gockel of Sundown, and a justice of the peace of the town for four years brought some amusement into the lengthy trial this morning when asked whether he had talked to anyone about the case.

Gockel said, "I shouldn't be surprised."

"Who?" asked Mr. Ewig.

"That does not matter, does it," replied the witness.

"How It Had Went."

Pressed for an answer as to whom he might have talked to Mr. Gockel said neighbors had asked "how it had went." And on further pressing the matter Mr. Ewig was told that the witness had talked to W. A. DuBois and also John J. Coddington.

"You discussed it with Mr. Coddington," said Ewig. "What was discussed?"

"Oh, 12-17," replied the witness.

"What do you mean 12-17?" asked Ewig.

"The score, 12-17" replied the witness. "I mean the vote last week."

"And you thought that was an un-

Dillinger Escapes Again Leaving Two Dead, Four Seriously Wounded

Eludes Army of Federal Agents and Deputy Sheriffs In a North Woods Hideout—Dillinger and Six Members of His Gang Fleeing With a Force of 50 Close Behind—Three Young Women Surrender—Report of the Department of Justice.

Mercer, Wis., April 23 (AP)—John "Wooden Gun" Dillinger, will-o-the-wisp terrorist, again eluded an army of Federal agents and deputy sheriffs early today in a north woods hideout, where he and six men and five women companions had hidden in an armed camp since last Friday.

His latest escape cost the lives of two men and the serious wounding of four others.

Dillinger and six members of his machine gun gang were at bay in the woods of the Lac Du Flambeau resort region. They were fleeing over roads soft from melting snow, and a force of 50 was close behind.

One Department of Justice agent was among the dead and another was wounded.

Cornered late last night in Little Bohemia, a Spider Lake dance hall and tavern nine miles southeast of Mercer, Dillinger had had the narrowest escape of the weeks of pursuit in which the government have trailed them about the country.

Three young women were left behind, and surrendered when the besieging forces filled the resort, a sprawling building housing living quarters and a cabaret, with tear gas.

The first victim, a bystander, was Eugene Boisoneau, killed outright by the federal agent's fire as he and two companions drove away from the resort.

The shots warned Dillinger and his band, who had taken forcible possession of the resort Friday, mounting a machine gun on the roof and posting lookouts.

They fled out a rear door and separated in the thick Wisconsin woods.

Three turned up a few minutes later at Mitchell's resort, commandeered a car, and drove off ahead of the federal men. One other, carrying a machine gun over his arm, ran into a nearby tavern, Turner's resort, and demanded of Alvin Turner that he furnish him a car.

Before Turner could reply, an auto containing two government men and a constable drew up outside.

Shouting "who's that?" the desperado ran out and opened fire with his machine gun.

W. Carter Baum, a Chicago federal agent, was killed. Constable Carl C. Christensen of Spider Lake, Wis., was critically wounded; and J. C. Newman of Chicago, a department of justice agent, was seriously wounded.

Two Dead, Four Wounded

The gunplay had taken two lives and left four wounded. Two of Boisoneau's companions were struck by bullets.

The department of justice, in its official report, said Dillinger and three followers, among them John Hamilton, his first lieutenant,

Ridley "Heir" Called Imposter By Judge At New York Today

Poughkeepsie Farmer Ordered Taken To D. A.'s Office By Metropolitan Surrogate—Seals Made in 1934 Jeweler Testifies.

New York, April 23 (AP)—Jens Nelson, Poughkeepsie, N. Y., farmer and claimant of the $4,000,000 estate of the slain Edward A. Ridley, was branded an imposter today by Surrogate James A. Foley and ordered taken to the district attorney's office.

The surrogate acted after a Poughkeepsie jeweler testified that the seal of both a birth and a death certificate produced by Nelson and dated 1866 was made in Poughkeepsie in 1934.

Herbert C. Smyth, Richard Arnold and Alexander Dow, attorneys who have been fighting for several months to uphold Nelson's claim that he was the son of Ridley, were granted permission by Surrogate Foley to withdraw from the case.

"I appreciate the position of counsel," the surrogate said. "Lawyers may be imposed upon by a client and especially a very cunning client. I have known Mr. Smyth for many years and know that he would not willingly enter into such a case if he had known the facts. Mr. Arnold and Mr. Dow early in the case informed me that they had every reason to believe that Nelson's claim was a genuine one, but stated they would withdraw if the documents he produced did not stand up under searching investigation. I can make no final disposition at this time, but when a disposition is made it will be done decisively and expeditiously."

Finns Sentence Two Spies to Prison Terms

Abo, Finland, April 23 (AP)—Arvid Werner Jacobson, former Michigan school teacher, was sentenced today to five years' imprisonment as a spy.

Mme. Marie Emma Schul, also found guilty of espionage, received an eight-year term.

Jacobson, held since last August, was alleged to be a member of an international ring of spies operating in Finland.

During the period of police investigation, ramifications were sought with the organization which operated in France and with which Mr. and Mrs. Robert Gordon Switz of East Orange, N. J., and New York, were alleged to be connected. Mr. and Mrs. Switz are still being held in Paris for questioning.

Kingston Hospital Cornerstone Laid Just 40 Years Ago

Institution Changed Greatly Since Original Building Was Dedicated—Was Gala Occasion—Everett Fowler Was Grand Marshal of Big Parade—Judge Hasbrouck Called Away.

The corner stone of the Kingston Hospital on Broadway was laid with appropriate ceremonies on Saturday afternoon, April 22, 1893, just forty years ago, by Mayor David Kennedy. Since that eventful day many changes have been made in the institution, which has been entirely rebuilt since the fire of some years ago.

The Freeman in reporting the corner stone laying stated that the ceremony was made doubly impressive by the great throng of spectators, the music of Goeller's band and the singing of a large number of trained male voices.

It was shortly after 2 o'clock that afternoon when the procession left the city hall with Everett Fowler as grand marshal, leading, followed by a platoon of police; Goeller's Band, the Fourteenth Separate Company in charge of Lieutenant Tompkins; school children numbering about 500 with flags; the singers, the board of hospital managers, the speakers and the members of the common council.

The program as arranged was carried out with the exception of the delivery of an address prepared by Judge G. D. B. Hasbrouck, who was called out of town by the death of a near relative. The Rev. Dr. R. L. Burtsell of St. Mary's Church and vice president of the board of hospital managers, delivered an address reviewing the past work and history of the hospital movement. John W. Searing also delivered an address.

Dr. George C. Smith, president of the hospital managers, had died shortly before the corner stone laying.

The plans for the hospital were prepared by Charles W. Romeyn, architect.

SAD DOG GUARDS HOUSEBOAT OF MASTER KILLED THURSDAY

Memphis, Tenn., April 23 (AP).—Red, a large sand-colored dog that understands nothing but Swedish, stands sentinel over the Mississippi river houseboat of Eric Johnsson, his slain master.

Johnsson, 45, was shot and killed Thursday night in his houseboat. When police arrived the dog was guarding the body. Since then he has remained on the river bank, howling disconsolately at intervals. Red defies attempts to feed him or lure him from the place.

Lawrence Cuneo, a friend of Johnsson, predicts that Red will die of starvation. "It does no good to call him. He understands nothing but Swedish for that was the way Johnsson talked to him."

Today, while the faithful Red howled on the river bank, his master's body was buried. Police are searching for Johnsson's slayer.

PLOTTERS AGAINST KING GET JAIL SENTENCES

Bucharest, Rumania, April 23 (AP)—Struggling to stamp out anti-government plotters, Rumania turned the locks today on 13 convicted conspirators sentenced to ten years in prison.

The accused—eight army officers and five civilians—were found guilty of high treason on charges of plotting to kill King Carol, his friend, the beautiful Mme. M. Gda Lupescu, members of the royal family and cabinet leaders.

The military court which sentenced the plotters stripped the officers, including Colonel Victor Prekup of the general staff, of their rank. It fined the civilians $100 each.

Colonel Prekup and his co-defendants vigorously contended they were innocent, asserting their loyalty to the regime.

FEINBERG WAS RELEASED ON BAIL SATURDAY

Abram Feinberg of Gardiner, sentenced to the Ulster county jail for 60 days, in addition to a fine of $50, after arraignment before William B. Carr of Clintondale, was released on bail Saturday, pending an appeal. He is represented by Frank W. Brooks. Feinberg had been committed to jail on Friday.

Three Found Guilty of Third Degree Assault Get Six Months in Jail

Peter Cohen, George Cohen and Morris Rand Found Guilty of Assaulting Special Constable George R. Van Aken at Ellenville on August 11.

Peter Cohen, 24, George Cohen, 32, and Morris Rand, 29, on trial in county court since Wednesday of last week on a charge of assaulting Special Constable George R. Van Aken at Ellenville on the night of August 11, were found guilty by the jury Saturday night. The defendants had been indicted and tried on a charge of assault in the second degree, but the jury brought in a verdict of guilty to third degree assault, after deliberating for several hours. It is understood that one juror was responsible for the lesser verdict, the other jurors having on the early ballots voted to find the defendants guilty as charged in the indictment.

Judge Frederick G. Traver immediately sentenced the defendants to serve six months in the Ulster county jail and they were at once committed to jail to begin service of their sentences.

Daniel H. Prior, noted criminal lawyer, who had been retained to represent the defendants in the case, summed up for the defense when court reconvened at one o'clock Saturday afternoon, occupying about an hour and a half. He was followed by District Attorney Murray, who took about an hour and a quarter in his summation for the people. The case was given to the jury about 4:15, following Judge Traver's charge and it was around eight o'clock before the jury returned and announced that a verdict had been agreed upon.

Several Cases in Police Court Here

Michael Murphy of Albany, arrested here for panhandling on Saturday evening, was sentenced to 30 days in the county jail. Saturday morning he had faced the judge in police court on a similar charge and had been given an opportunity to leave town which he did not take.

Thomas Higgins of Port Ewen, arrested for public intoxication, was fined $5.

Patrick Madden, 16, of 7 DeWitt street, was without cash and wanted to see the show in the Broadway Theatre on Saturday and so attempted to get in by way of the roof and was caught. The youth was arrested by Manager Bert Gildersleeve and turned over to the police on a charge of disorderly conduct. This morning Judge Culloton decided to give the youth another chance and suspended sentence.

Joseph Weber, 63, of 57 Howland avenue, was arrested on a charge of disorderly conduct in using loud and profane language on that street. This morning Judge Culloton deferred the imposition of sentence for two days and fixed bail at $50.

Thomas Scott, a negro who said he had no home, was fined $5 for public intoxication on Yeomans street.

Henry Fowler, Harvey Short and James Donovan, three men from Highland, were arrested for disorderly conduct on Hasbrouck avenue, in using loud and profane language. Fowler and Short were fined $5 each, while Donovan had his hearing adjourned until later.

100 Years of Dress To Be Shown Friday

A pageant of women's fashions, featuring the changes in wedding gowns for a number of years, will be presented at the Kingston Municipal Auditorium Friday evening, when Mrs. Roger Loughran offers "A Century of Fashions," for the benefit of the new Wiltwyck Golf Club, which will open for the first time this spring.

Mrs. Loughran announced this morning the preparations are nearly completed and the fashion revue will present a comprehensive study of the dress worn by Ulster county women for the past hundred years. An interesting note in connection with the affair is the fact that all of the dresses came from the attics and trunks of Ulster county people, and will be modeled by young women from this vicinity, in some cases by descendants of the original wearers.

Specifically the proceeds of the affair will be used to develop a club house for the new course, which was planned and arranged during the past summer, and which is now said to be in fine playing condition.

Following the fashion revue, which is to be one of the most pretentious ever held here, dancing will be enjoyed to the melodies of Paul Zucca and Roger Baer, and their orchestras.

Tickets for the fashion show and dance may be obtained at Dedrick's Drug Store on Wall street and McBride's Drug Store on Broadway.

Ten Days in Jail.

William Allen, 31, negro, of Poughkeepsie, was committed to the Ulster county jail Sunday by Justice S. G. Carpenter of Highland, to serve ten day in default of a fine of $10. Allen was charged with public intoxication.

Anthony Damino Fatally Shot John Mancusco Held as Killer

North Street Scene of Fatal Shooting Saturday Night—Following the Shooting Mancusco Called at Police Headquarters and Gave Himself Up—Said He Threw Gun Away and It Cannot Be Found—Police Say There Had Been Bad Blood Between the Two.

Anthony Damino, 27, of 13 Cordt's street, was fatally shot about 6:45 o'clock Saturday evening, and John Mancusco, 36, of 57 Gill street, is being held by the police for the shooting, after Mancusco had called at police headquarters shortly after the shooting and given himself up. According to the police there had been bad blood between the two men for some time, and Mancusco told the police that Damino had made threats against him two weeks ago.

The shooting was witnessed by Robert Gordon, of 115 Linderman avenue, a driver of one of the city busses, who was returning with his bus along North street when he saw Mancusco stop his car, get out and start firing at Damino, who ran up the side of the claybank alongside the road. Gordon saw Damino fall to the ground following the shots and stepping on the gas he drove his bus to the nearest telephone where he called up police headquarters. Officers Relyea and Stewart in the police car hurried to the scene and removed the wounded man to the Kingston Hospital where he died at 12:05 o'clock Sunday morning.

Mancusco's Story

Just as the police squad was preparing to leave the city hall in charge of Sergeant Simpson to hunt for the one who did the shooting Mancusco drove up to the building and gave himself up.

According to the police Mancusco made a statement in which he said that about 6:45 o'clock Saturday evening as he was driving along North street in his car he saw Damino standing near a telephone pole just beyond East Union street and that he remembered that Damino had said he was going to kill him. Mancusco, according to the police, said he decided that he would get Damino first and stopping his car he alighted and drawing his gun started shooting. Mancusco said he fired several times.

Damino Ran Up Bank

According to Gordon's story who saw the shooting from his bus Damino ran up the side of the embankment with Mancusco after him and just as Damino reached the top of the bank he fell to the ground.

Mancusco told the police that after the shooting he dropped the gun near the body of Damino, but a search later by police officers failed to locate the gun which is still missing.

The weapon is said to be a Lugar pistol of .30 calibre. The police however, found three empty shells near the scene of the shooting.

Father Died Near Scene

An odd coincidence is the fact that about 27 years ago the dead man's father met death on North street, near the scene of his son's slaying. The father was the victim of a rock hurled by one negro at another, which struck him in the head, killing him. The father's death, however, was an accident.

Probing For Motive

The police are still busy probing for the motive of the shooting of Damino, who is a tailor and employed by the Boston Cleaners. It is said, however, that Mancusco had accused Damino with attempting to break up his home.

Damino Was To Be Married

The police learned that Damino was shortly to be married to a girl in Glasco. Damino was a man about five feet tall with a heavy head of bushy hair, and generally went about town without wearing a hat.

Mancusco is also a medium sized man and is married and the father of four children, the oldest 11 years and the youngest 5 years. He was at one time employed at the former Fischer Hotel on the Strand, and also at one time conducted a refreshment place on Mill street.

Had Pistol Permit

Mancusco has a permit to carry a pistol which was issued here in January of this year.

Damino Made Statement

Shortly before Damino died at the Kingston Hospital he made a statement to Sergeant Simpson of the police department in which he said that Mancusco came toward him firing a gun, and that no words passed between them as Mancusco stopped his car and started for him with blazing gun.

Where Bullets Hit Damino

District Attorney Murray, who had been notified of the shooting by the police ordered an autopsy performed which was done by Dr. Van Gaasbeek and Dr. LeFever. The autopsy disclosed that Damino had been struck by three bullets, one in his groin, another in the right buttock and a third through his wrist.

Searched For Gun

Sunday morning Officers Fatum and Burger made a thorough search of the vicinity for the gun used, but were unable to find the weapon, but they did find the three empty shells.

Others Saw Shooting

According to the police the shoot-

Poison Gas to Guard New Treasury Vaults

Washington, April 23 (AP)—Death by poison gas lurks in huge steel doors the government is setting in place on new vaults in the U. S. treasury.

A super-burglar who by some miracle penetrated half-way through the 30 inches of metal would die quickly and horribly in a cloud of gas generated by chemicals concealed in the doors.

The vaults—big enough to contain all the monetary gold stock in the country as well as huge treasures in silver, currency and securities—will be completed in September at a cost of $290,000.

They will form as impregnable a monetary fortress as any in the world. Walls are built of concrete and matted steel, 27 inches thick, lined with metal plates reputedly impervious to tool or torch.

The latest thing in electrical burglar alarms and time locks with a maximum of 96 hours feature the vaults. In tunnels underneath, above and around the vaults guards will patrol night and day.

Public Invited to Hear Dr. S. W. Wynne

The public is invited to attend the meeting at the court house in Kingston at 8 o'clock, Tuesday evening, April 24, at which Dr. Shirley W. Wynne, former health commissioner of New York city, will speak. The meeting is being arranged by the dairy committee of the Ulster County Farm Bureau and the matters to be discussed are of vital importance to consumers of milk as well as producers.

Dr. Wynne is now president of the Greater New York-New Jersey Milk Institute and will discuss some of the dairy problems which are now uppermost in the minds of most people. C. L. Allen, chairman of the county dairy committee, will give a report on the proposed dairy production control program of the Agricultural Adjustment Administration. C. C. DuMond, president of the Farm Bureau, will be chairman of the meeting and a representative of the Kingston mayor's office is expected to be on the program.

This is the last meeting of the series planned by the county dairy committee, until next winter and a large crowd is expected.

EARLY MORNING FIRE IN SHOE REPAIRING SHOP

The fire department was called out about 8 o'clock this morning by an alarm from Box 53, for a fire in the shoe repairing shop at 338 Broadway, operated by Carl Esposito. A can of gasolene under the work bench had become upset and when a match was lighted to light a stove the fumes ignited, setting fire to some rags and the bench. Four pair of shoes were burned and a bootblack stand also damaged before the fire was brought under control.

Ambulance Calls Here.

The ambulance on Saturday removed Suzanne Abramowitz from the Kingston Hospital to 155 Albany avenue; Katherine Fredericks from 139 Greenkill avenue to the Benedictine Hospital and Warren McGee from the Shultz brickyard to the Kingston Hospital. On Sunday the ambulance removed John Fullerton from 411 Washington avenue to the Kingston Hospital.

Taxpayers' Meeting.

The Taxpayers' Economic League of West Hurley will meet Thursday, April 26, at 7:30 o'clock at Pine Crest Hall, corner of Morgan Hill road. Important business will be discussed and all taxpayers are invited to attend.

Junior League Gives Hospital Book Service

The Benedictine and Kingston Hospitals have accepted the offer of the Junior League of Kingston to organize and maintain at each hospital a lending library.

An ingenious moveable book case has been devised and so constructed that it is possible for the patients to readily select the reading material they desire.

League members will be in charge and will give their services two days each week for the distribution of books and periodicals.

This new project is supplemental to the baby welfare program that the league has been carrying on for the past 12 years in the community.

Catholic Charities Drive Began Sunday

Twenty thousand workers in 371 [illegible] Sunday a house to house canvass from Staten Island to Saugerties designated to provide in one week a contribution of $[illegible] toward the support of organized Catholic Charities in the Archdiocese of New York.

Last year [illegible] persons among the [illegible] Catholics in the [illegible] parishes contributed a total of $[illegible], an average of less than $[illegible] a person. This year a higher mark is set because of a much greater need in certain divisions of the work due to necessary deficits and also to the increased burden of rehabilitating for industrial reemployment thousands of persons whose morale has been shattered by the depression.

Last Thursday evening an unusual event testified to the meticulous care with which the work has been organized. In 371 parish schools from Staten Island to Saugerties, where special radio equipment had been installed, the 20,000 men and women workers heard final appeals and received their last instructions from Cardinal Hayes and former Governor Alfred E. Smith speaking in Manhattan at the last of five testimonial dinners in honor of the elevation 15 years ago of Bishop Hayes to the Archbishopric.

This dinner also marked the close of a [illegible] of the Cardinal's emergency committee under the chairmanship of former Governor Smith [illegible] appeal for funds [illegible] the opening of the drive.

Last year the organization working through [illegible] agencies aided [illegible] families, children, homeless, orphans, crippled and underprivileged, aged, to the number of [illegible] were [illegible] of Catholic Charities. [illegible] agencies maintained [illegible] hospitals with a total population of [illegible] more than one-third of whom were free patients; 35 agencies of the division of social action maintained or contributed to camps, clubs, homes for working girls and the like, many of them under non-sectarian auspices.

The work of Catholic Charities is watched throughout the nation, and last fall at the invitation of the Cardinal, the 19th meeting of the National Conference of Catholic Charities was held in New York city. It was an outstanding event in the history of public welfare work and in the movement for recovery from the ravages of the economic depression. It was honored by the presence of the President of the United States, several members of his cabinet and his principal aides in the recovery program.

In organizing the parish appeal this year Cardinal Hayes has appointed the following chairmen for Ulster county:

The Rev. William T. F. Dooley, Kingston; the Rev. Francis P. Borowski, Walter Madajiwski, the Rev. James F. Hanley, Edward T. Wynes, Marlborough; the Rev. Francis M. O'Reilly and John Koenig, Rosendale, the Very Rev. John J. Stanley, V. F., Kingston.

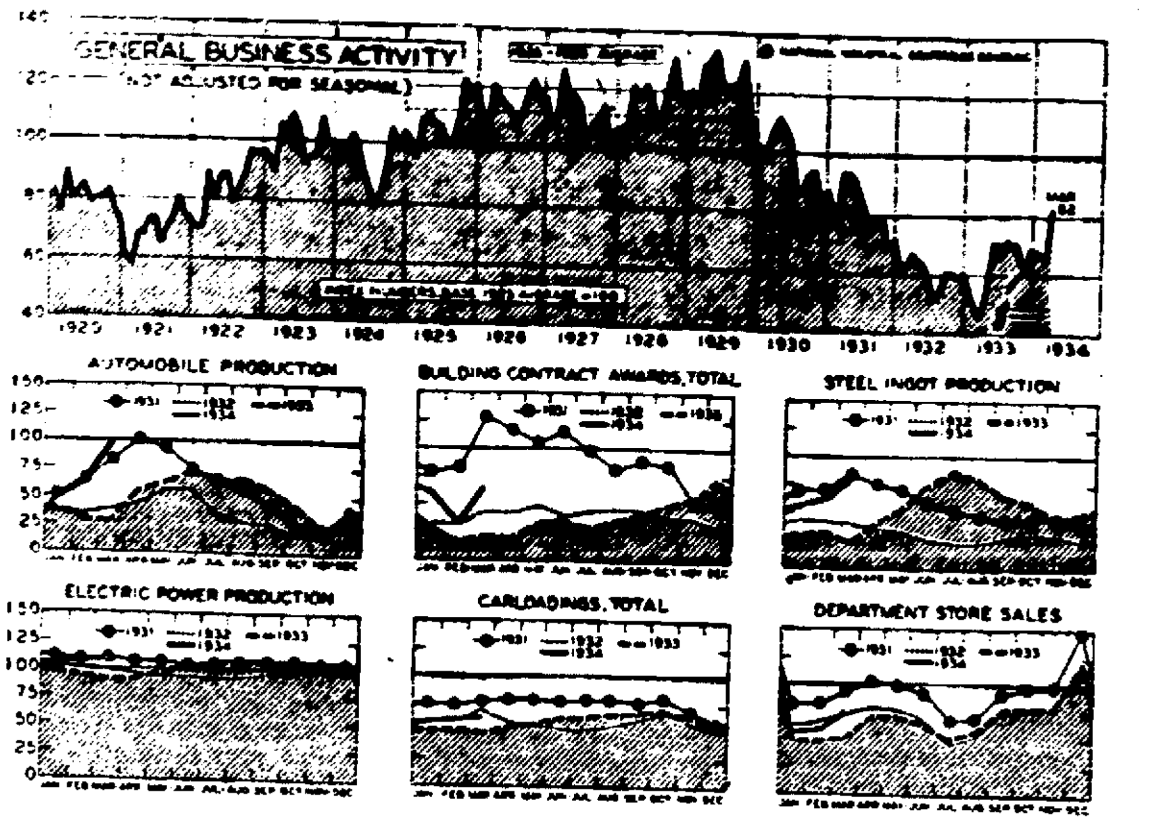
Business Better In March, April, With More Than Seasonal Gains



(By The Associated Press)

General business activity in the United States increased strongly in March and the first part of April, it is shown in the report of the conference of statisticians of the National Industrial Conference board.

Production of automobiles and trucks in the United States and Canada in March increased 40 per cent over February of this year and 173 per cent over March of last year.

Construction Increases

Building and engineering construction, with an increase in March of 85 per cent over February, had almost doubled the usual seasonal gains. Residential contracts awarded in March advanced 93.5 per cent over February, and non-residential awards increased 100 per cent.

Steel production continued to expand last month after recording a sharp increase in February. Average daily output in March was 12.3 per cent over the February average and 207.4 per cent above that of a year ago. Operations in March were 42.6 per cent of capacity compared with 34.1 per cent in January.

Power Avoids Slump

Electric power production in March rose, counter to seasonal expectations, the rise of 0.5 per cent standing against a 1.5 per cent seasonal decline expectation.

General distribution advanced, with the increase in rail shipments of raw materials being measurably more than seasonal. The increase in shipments of processed items, however, was slightly less than seasonal.

Department store sales increased 26.3 per cent over the previous month in dollar value of turn over, reaching a point 44 per cent over March, 1932. Prices moved up 0.4 per cent in March compared with February and were 23.4 per cent over March of last year.

Big Variety Program At Wallkill Prison

Wallkill, April 23.—The more than three score talented players at the Medium Security Prison here are putting the finishing touches to the variety show which will be presented at the institution's auditorium Thursday and Friday evenings, April 26 and 27.

A complete variety program embracing all types of entertainment has been arranged by L. W. Davis, who is directing the production, and the first annual vaudeville show by the inmates will not only be a balanced but highly entertaining performance.

In addition to staging "The Valiant," a Broadway scream success, six diversified acts of vaudeville have been selected. Good singing, snappy dancing, exhilarating humor with the necessary professional touch has been perfected by steady rehearsals.

The show, which will be of more than two hours' duration, will be open to the general public and is expected to attract a large gathering of theatregoers from this section of thestate. Tickets may be available at the door.

For those who remember the days of Denman Thompson and his famous "Old Homestead," there will be a country store act that fairly tange with racy New England flavor. The lovers of colored revivals will be treated to a "peppy" replica of a Georgia camp meeting with a modern touch; while those who have wondered what hoboes do when they are hitting the road will have their curiosity satisfied in an act laid in the "Jungles of Wallkill."

A clever cartoonist, two snappy dialogue acts and selections by the well known institution will complete the bill.

In selecting the cast for the show Mr. Davis and his assistants arranged for diversification so that the term variety would be indicative of the type of program instead of a mere name for the production.

Kingston residents wishing to procure tickets for the show before making the trip to Wallkill may do so from S. Stern, optician of lower Broadway; Harry Maisenhelder, local band leader; J. Lang's music store on John street, and from Sweeney & Schonger, clothiers.

Ends Birthday, Killing Wife, Friend at Party

Pittsburgh, Pa.—James M. Cain, seventy years old, climaxed his two day birthday celebration by killing his wife and shooting a friend fatally while in his home in downtown Pittsburgh.

Tragic undertones had been sustained through the birthday celebration, for only a few days ago he learned he was to be retired without a pension, after 40 years as a railroad machinist, because he had been in the "outlaw" strike of 1920.

Cain was prevented from taking his own life when police leaped on him after surrounding his home at 16 Boyd street.

Motor Fuel Tax Share For Ulster, $28,214.60

Albany, N. Y., April 18—The sum of $3,974,150.70, representing motor fuel tax collections for the quarter ending March 31, is ready for distribution, Mark Graves, commissioner of taxation and finance, has notified Comptroller Morris S. Tremaine.

Of this amount $2,398,328.59, goes to the state of New York; of the remainder 20 per cent, or $315,164.43 goes to the city of New York and the remaining 80 per cent, or $1,260,657.68, is distributed to the counties outside of New York city on the basis of the county's mileage of unimproved roads outside of cities and incorporated villages.

Of the sum retained by the state, two-fifths goes into the general fund and the remaining three-fifths into the highway fund for highway purposes. The amount received by New York city is paid into the general fund of the city, while the share received by the counties is used for highway purposes, and 50 per cent of the county's share may, by a two-thirds vote of the board of supervisors, be used to retire bonded indebtedness incurred for highways.

The last distribution of motor fuel tax money was made January 10, when $5,987,264.73 was apportioned. The next distribution will be made in July.

Details of the distribution to Ulster and surrounding counties are as follows:

County	Mileage	Allotment
Ulster	1,602.77	$28,214.60

A Washington Daybook

By HERBERT PLUMMER

WASHINGTON—The state of Texas, already holder of a number of distinctions and titles in the "new deal" administration, has added another to its list.

Senator Morris Sheppard, by the death of Representative Pou of North Carolina, becomes the ranking member of both houses of congress in the matter of continuous service.

The mild-mannered, gray-haired little Texan, the father of the 18th amendment, has served in the senate for 21 years and was a member of the house for 11 years before. His years of service in congress now stand at 33 and it will not be until 1937 that his present term expires.

Next to Sheppard stands Joe Robinson of Arkansas, democratic leader of the senate, who has spent 21 years in that body and 10 years before that in the house, and Norris of Nebraska, who has served continuously since the 58th congress (1903).

Vice President Garner has served exactly the same length of time as Senator Robinson.

* * *

Borah Senate Dean

IN THE senate, Borah of Idaho, who has spent 27 years in that body, is dean. In the house, Speaker Rainey, who has served [illegible] terms, is the oldest member in point of service. He has been in the house every session from the 58th congress to the present 73rd, except one. Pou of North Carolina had served 17 consecutive terms, beginning with the 57th in 1901.

The all-time record for continuous service in the senate and house was established by Senator Justin S. Morrill of Vermont, who served 12 years in the house and then 31 years, nine months in the senate for a total of 43 years, nine months' continuous service. Morrill began his senate service March 4, 1867, and died in office December 28, 1898.

Senator William B. Allison of Iowa also had an impressive record. He had served 35 years and five months in the senate at the time of his death, August 4, 1908.

* * *

Cannon Served 41 Years

SENATOR ALLISON'S record of more than 35 years in a single body of congress has not been surpassed, and his added service of 8 years in the house brought his total time of service within four months of that of Senator Morrill, although a two-year interval between his tenure in the house and his election to the senate interrupted his record for continuous service.

Second to Senator Morrill in the matter of continuous service in a single body of congress stands the record of the late Gilbert N. Haugen of Iowa, who served 34 years in the house until his death.

"Uncle Joe" Cannon of Illinois, however, surpassed both Allison and Haugen in the matter of total service in one house. "Uncle Joe" spent 41 years, although not consecutively, in the house. Eight of those years he was speaker.

Children Live in Jail as Mother Serves Term

Sofia.—When, several months ago, a poor widow was sentenced to nine months' imprisonment here, she begged that her two children might be allowed to live with her in jail because she had no friends or relatives who would look after them. One of the children is a girl aged five, the other a boy aged ten.

Permission was granted. Every day the little boy has left the prison for school and has returned in the evening, being searched on leaving and returning in case he should be carrying secret messages or articles forbidden in the prison.

Several persons have been so moved by the pathetic story that they have petitioned the minister of justice to liberate the mother.

Back Sore and Lame?

FOR those who suffer from pains across kidneys, heavy, dull feelings and sometimes swollen ankles or feet, Dr. Pierce's newer medicine, called "Anuric", brings relief. Read what James Chase of 688 3rd Ave., Troy, N. Y., says: "At times I would get a sharp pain across my back and side that fairly took my breath away. In the morning I was sore and lame. My kidneys were weak and I often had to get up at night. I started to use Dr. Pierce's Anuric. These tablets gave me real relief from the backache and regulated my kidneys so that they functioned normally." Sold by all druggists.

Send 10c to Dr. Pierce's Clinic, Buffalo, N. Y., for a trial package of Anuric. Write for free medical advice. "We Do Our Part."

Milton, April 23—The minstrel show given by the members of Lake Katrine Grange and dance sponsored by the Milton Grange held in Woolsey's Hall Friday evening was largely attended and very much enjoyed. An added feature, the R. K. Kiddie Kapers, was presented by the R. K. Dancing School of Kingston. Pupils who took part in this were between four and twelve years of age and their dancing was wonderful for children of that age. The minstrel show was written and directed by Roger Keough, instructor of the R. K. Dancing School. Soil of Ellis Island

The area of Ellis island is 21 acres, while originally it was but 3.3. Two islands were built to the southwest and tied to it by causeways. Later, made ground was added. Foreign ships were permitted to dump their ballast there, so to some extent this island for the reception of immigrants is made of foreign soil.

CANADIAN BUSINESS CONTROL

Canada, which for a while fought shy of American recovery methods and seemed to be getting along pretty well without them, is slipping lately. While resistance to business regulation grows in this country, the present cry across the border is "regulation for recovery." "Never before in any year," says a recent dispatch from Ottawa, "has the country beheld so many efforts by lawmakers to put industry, finance and business generally under government supervision."

There is this difference, though. While our recovery measures so far have been carried on chiefly by the federal government, in Canada the initiative is taken mainly by provincial legislatures. Their activities are surprising. The province of Alberta has just adopted what looks like a moderate replica of our NRA, in the form of a bill to regulate trade and industry. It provides for business codes which will be binding on industries with regard to wages, conditions of labor and prices of products, with an advisory board to safeguard the rights of consumers.

The federal parliament is pushing a national marketing plan whereby a government board will control import, export and general marketing of Canadian products, in cooperation with provincial boards. The "natural products marketing act" will govern the wholesale movement of farm, sea and forest products, and possibly the distribution of manufactured goods, wholesale and retail.

The House of Commons of Ottawa is also investigating banking methods, and Premier Bennett is taking steps to ease the financial condition of farmers. Meanwhile provincial NRA's seem to be multiplying. British Columbia, Saskatchewan, Quebec, New Brunswick, Nova Scotia and Prince Edward Island are all engaged in strengthening public control over industry, trade and finance. Ontario is now concerning itself especially with a building code. Americans will take much interest in watching to see how these experiments next door work out.

ITALIAN SWAMPTOWN.

Premier Mussolini adds to his credit the reclamation of the most famous swamp in history—the Pontine Marshes. Swamps often serve a useful purpose, storing water or breeding fish and game. But not when they are infested with anopheles mosquitoes. A malarial swamp is a country slum.

That swamp, comprising four or five hundred square miles south of Rome, was cultivated in ancient times. But as long ago as the time of Augustus Caesar it was an abandoned, pestiferous waste. Nobody knew then about mosquitoes, but they knew the deadly fever. Augustus tried to drain it and failed. Others tried it through the ages and failed. Those malaria mosquitoes are credited, as much as any other cause, with the destruction of Rome, through their sapping of human vitality.

Three years ago Mussolini started his big engineering job. Large areas have been made safe for habitation by draining and oil-spraying. He has built on the edge of the dried-up marsh, on a slight elevation, the brand-new town of Sabaudia, destined to hold 20,000 people. From there the redemption work will continue southward toward Naples, and in other parts of the country. There will be more little farms for the teeming Italian nation, and more food to feed them. This is the best kind of national expansion—far better than conquest, which Italy used to think the best way, and some nations still do.

FEDERAL RELIEF CONTINUES

It is just as well that the government has run behind its schedule in relief expenditures. There may still be use for the unspent money. The new relief appropriation of $2,200,000,000 asked by Federal Relief Administrator Hopkins is an eye-opener.

There is evidently no bluffing about this. In spite of business recovery with its re-employment of millions, which has been rejoicing the hearts of business men, relief demands on the federal government are greater than ever. This comes from two causes: First, several millions who still have no work are nearer the end of their resources than ever before. Second, private charities, local public charities and state charities are mostly drained so dry that they can provide little relief money for some time to come. Hundreds of the smaller political units are virtually bankrupt and the fountains of taxation are almost dry.

Generally speaking, only the national government maintains its credit and possesses adequate resources. So it will have to carry the relief load until states, counties, cities, villages and other minor units get back on their feet. Dole or no dole, the job must be done. This fact being granted, the important thing is to do it as constructively as possible, giving the beneficiaries useful work, preserving their self-respect and leaving the country with something lasting to show for its expenditure.

GOVERNMENTAL BALANCE.

Many Americans nowadays have an uneasy feeling that the government has too much power. Many, too, feel that business has too much power. Success probably depends on balancing these two forces.

Bishop C. H. LeBlond of St. Joseph, Mo., observes that "a board of directors sitting in a little room hundreds of miles from a community can change the fortunes of that community by a stroke of a pen. Families may be made destitute, and the children of those families suffer especially, from causes they cannot control. "The stability of government," he adds, "depends on its families, and the stability of a family depends on its children. For that reason, the government is gradually beginning to realize that social agencies have a place in the scheme of things."

Business and government both, and all the individuals and groups composing them, have to see social processes more clearly and develop more "social consciousness," in order to square modern life with modern facts.

GREATEST ASSET—HEALTH.

Some years ago one of the largest, if not the largest, industrial organization in the world, wanted to find out why so many of their staff—office and road staff—seemed to fall away in their work and either resigned or were discharged.

Accordingly a Professor of Economics was placed on their staff and was able to point out the various causes of why these executives or employes resigned or were discharged.

And at the top of the list, leading every other cause by a great distance was ill health. Other causes were financial distress and domestic unhappiness or illness, but ill health stood out like a great stone wall blocking the progress of these men.

It is not hard to see that even if the individual has a good brain and plenty of ambition he can only go as far in business or life as his body will take him.

The biggest asset to anyone is to have good health; the biggest liability is ill health.

Dr. Emlyn Jones, in the Pennsylvania Bulletin of Statistics says, "Good health is not only a valuable asset in itself, it unlocks the door of all other faculties". Loss of confidence is one of the most serious effects of ill health; many a man of great accomplishments has been left behind because he has not the power to use them. He is so afraid of making mistakes that the psychological moment has gone past, before he has made up his mind.

Track back the history of characters such as this and you will find that in almost all cases they have been weakly individuals, who, on account of their lack of vigor and health, were afraid to take the plunge.

Everything in this world varies according to the way it is looked at, and we are liable to make wrong conclusions when we are not feeling up to the mark."

Thus, the above statements of Dr. Jones agree exactly with those of Lord Chesterfield who said, "An attack of indigestion, a sleepless night, and a rainy morning, can make a coward out of one who might otherwise have been a hero".

I believe the above statements from three different sources make it only too clear that the greatest human asset is good health.

Good health is attained and maintained by observing just three things—the right amount and kinds of food, the right amount of exercise or play, and the right amount of rest and sleep.

Judith Lane

Chapter 43

ON THE STAND

JUDITH arose and rushed away to a far corner. She had no business listening, but to whom could he be talking? Judge Morgan probably, he would be interested in how she was feeling.

Later that morning, as she was dressing, she thought again of the conversation. The line, "she hadn't expected that kind of an attack." Well, she hadn't. She sent Delphy for the wide brimmed hat and pulled it low over her face. She would at least have that protection, if Lampere came in with other unjust accusations.

At the court room she discovered that Lampere had moved the chairs of the Bevins' women forward so that they faced Judith across a wide table, in fact, so that every time she looked towards the jury box, her gaze would be intercepted by the hatred which seemed to dwell eternally in Mathile's eyes.

"An old trick, we'll fix that," said Judge Morgan, and moved his client's chair back to the end of the table so that she sat in full view, but only by deliberately turning their backs to the judge, could the Bevins women stare their opponent out of countenance.

Your honor, I would like to enter this as exhibit A

The morning was used by Lampere to establish his claim that Tom Bevins was mentally ill during the last year of his life. To prove this he called the Bevins servants, personal friends. Dr. Kenneth Kelly was placed on the stand to testify to the nature of Tom Bevins' illness and to admit that such an illness could cause a mental reaction, even an advanced state of dementia.

"That will be all," said Lampere.

"But, Mr. Lampere," objected Dr. Kelly, "in testifying I want it understood that where Tom Bevins was concerned—"

"That will be all," repeated Lampere, "I will call the next witness . . ." he glanced towards Judith; she was trembling with indignation, anger. Her wide grey eyes were brilliant with tears.

"Miss Lane . . . I beg your pardon, Mrs. Dale, will you kindly take the stand?"

"YOUR Honor," Judge Morgan was on his feet, facing the Judge by the time Lampere's voice had stopped. "Mr. Lampere forgets that my client is not the defendant. His work here is to prove the fallacy of the will, not to persecute its present beneficiary."

Judith touched his arm, "I don't mind, Judge Morgan, I'm ready now."

Judith took her seat looking at Lampere with a calm gaze which should have been disconcerting.

"Miss, er, Mrs. Dale, when did you first meet Tom Bevins?"

"I don't remember exactly."

"Oh, come now, maybe I can refresh your memory. What year did you leave college?"

"But I'd met him years before that. He was my father's partner when I wasn't more than a year old. I believe my first recollection of him was when I was five or six. He brought me a doll and gave the foreman's boy a toy engine with flat cars."

"Very pretty story," laughed Lampere, then with elaborate sarcasm, "and of course you can prove it."

"Yes," answered Judith, and motioned Judge Morgan to hand her a letter, yellowed with age.

"Your honor, I would like to enter this as exhibit A," said Morgan, before releasing the letter to Judith.

"It isn't necessary to read it," barked Lampere.

"But you asked for proof," returned Judith sweetly, "this letter is to my father, telling him another train, flat cars and toy derrick are en route to me. The date is—"

"I'll pass that, Mrs. Dale. When did you next meet Tom Bevins?"

"I saw him frequently during my childhood until father went to South America and I started in college. Because of my mother's death when I was ten years old, I went into the field with my father. I had every intention of becoming an engineer so—"

"MRS. DALE, I am not asking for your life's history, I am asking you about your relations with Tom Bevins. When did you first become intimately acquainted with Mr. Bevins?"

"I received word of my father's death while I was in school. Mr. Bevins was in Austin at the time and heard of it. He came to me and offered to help me in any way he could."

"How did he help you?"

"By advising me what to do."

"Come now, Mrs. Dale, do you mean you didn't accept money from him at the time?"

"I did not. I was very young and very proud. My father had gone against Big Tom's advice in going to South America and had lost what money he had by doing so. I felt it would be disloyal to my father's memory to accept money."

"Why, then, did you try to force your way into his home?"

"I didn't!"

"Oh yes you did. You came down there bag and baggage, descended on Mrs. Bevins, and made yourself thoroughly at home. Didn't you, Mrs. Dale . . . honest, now, didn't you?"

"Mr. Bevins suggested I stay with them while I went to business school."

"But you didn't."

"Not after I heard Mrs. Bevins say she wouldn't have me around the house."

"And then didn't you and Tom Bevins go into a huddle and decide you were to come into his office at the first opportunity?"

"No," returned Judith, calmly, "I only intended working at stenography until I had earned enough to complete my college course."

"Then why didn't you do that, instead of hanging around the millionaire engineer?"

"Because after I had worked there a short time I realized I was learning more about engineering than I could learn in college. I was earning as much as a young woman engineer could learn and I was happy and contented."

"Mrs. Dale, prior to your marriage and when you were living in your pent house, was it not true that Tom Bevins was a constant visitor there?"

"Yes, he was," answered Judith readily, "the most welcome visitor who came."

"Mrs. Dale, would it embarrass you too much to tell the jury why Mr. Bevins called on you so often?"

"No." Judith caught her under lip in a quick smile, "he came to eat slumgullion."

Tomorrow, Judith's ordeal continues.

Mrs. McMullen Was Teachers' Speaker

Particularly interesting sessions of the School Women's Club of the Hudson Valley were held on Saturday, both morning and afternoon at the Governor Clinton Hotel. There were several members present from Newburgh and Cold Springs and four guests so that covers were laid at the luncheon for some 40 people.

At the business meeting in the morning, Miss Jane Mauterstock presided. Following the reports of the secretary and treasurer, letters of regret were read from several members, expressing their disappointment at having to be absent.

The nominating committee reported as follows: Miss Jane Mauterstock, Kingston, president; Miss Helen Gray, Cold Spring, vice president; Miss Agatha Flick, Kingston, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Elizabeth Sloan, Newburgh, recording secretary; Miss Arnetta Raschke, Kingston, treasurer. The report was accepted, and the officers named were unanimously elected. It was voted to hold the fall meeting of the club at Cold Spring. The club sent a note of sympathy to Miss Craig of Newburgh, one of the most loyal members, who was absent because of illness.

The speaker of the morning was Miss Frances Potts, grades superintendent of Newburgh. She took as her subject, "The Great Teacher," holding before her hearers a portrait of Jesus Christ as the greatest teacher of all time. Miss Potts spoke of the characteristics of Christ as a teacher of mankind that are today invaluable as ideals to all who truly teach, and are good teachers. Speaking of willing service, the speaker called attention to the fact that Christ placed the burdens of life that will be the lot of all, upon the shoulders, not of the weak, but of those who have strength of character, so that service carries the added honor of being a burden carried by those who have endured and are willing to be joint burden-bearers.

As the School Women and their guests entered the dining room for the luncheon, exclamations of delight were heard on every side, over the fascinating table decorations; that were the very epitome of spring. The centerpiece on each small table and the decorations of the guest table were sparkling, reflecting, silvery flower holders, carrying gay spring flowers and foliage that vied with real garden blooms in beauty. They were made by Miss Frieda Hays, president of the Kingston Chapter of the School Women's Club who also designed and made the tiny patch of earth (seemingly) with a little clump of cheery crocuses for the place cards. Miss Hays was highly complimented on her artistic and unique handiwork.

After the singing of The Doxology, Miss Mauterstock said that the teachers of Kingston had a superintendent, who with his wife, seemed to enjoy being with the teachers, and they surely enjoyed having both Mr. and Mrs. Van Ingen with them. Miss Mauterstock called on Mr. Van Ingen for a few words. Superintendent Van Ingen expressed for Mrs. Van Ingen and himself, pleasure in being present and complimented the club on the fine program of the morning and the gathering for luncheon. He added his welcome to that of the Kingston Club members to those from out of town. Having spent Friday at Albany, Superintendent Van Ingen brought back late news of legislation of particular interest to the teachers.

Miss Mauterstock then introduced the luncheon speaker as the one who addressed an open meeting of The Kingston Federation of Women's Clubs on the occasion of a luncheon early in the year. Everyone was so favorably impressed with Mrs. Laura Waples McMullen at that time, and learned pleasantly so much of value from her, that no time was lost in trying to secure her for the spring meeting of the School Women's Club and Miss Mauterstock found great pleasure in introducing Mrs. McMullen to the School Women's Club and guests.

Mrs. McMullen's topic was "Current Events," and after expressing her gratification in being again in Kingston and that in springtime, the speaker went at once to the heart of her subject.

She found two things that were significant signs of the times. One emanated from Germany which proposes to disregard the Versailles Treaty legally as she has been doing to all intents and purposes for some time.

The other came from Japan's foreign office, to the effect that she expects hereafter to decide all eastern problems including the monetary and league problems for China, India and some 16 other countries. She proposes to decide them in favor of the east—meaning Japan—as against the west, said the speaker.

Mrs. McMullen found three elements that were tending toward war very decidedly, although she felt that war was not yet inevitable, and that nations could catch themselves in time.

They were first the collapse of the economic systems of the world, causing world-wide poverty and that in the midst of plenty.

The psychopathic nationalism of Germany as a race was another possible cause of war, and the third was armament industry as it was at the time of the World War when we found there were those who were striving to get something for themselves though it involved a war that would mean vast destruction of humanity and property.

Mrs. McMullen was amazed at the gullibility over the latest news that air-bombing, etc., would not, after all prove anything like as destructive as has been stated. Europe knows that such warfare would be the end of civilization. Stanley Baldwin of England says that London could be utterly demolished by such means in 30 minutes.

Going back to the subject of poverty, with the ability to produce everything that man can use, Mrs. McMullen reminded her hearers that they are after all living in a transition period in the history of the world.

Mrs. McMullen next dwelt with Hitler, explaining how he began by promising everybody everything, and is only now learning how impossible it is to keep such promises. Today there is a real danger of an economic and financial collapse in Germany, which the speaker explained in some detail. The oppression and tyranny forced upon those of the older regime of culture and the humanities amounts almost to the very loss of their souls.

Coming to Austria, Mrs. McMullen, with the massacre of the Social Democrats and the efforts to bring Austria into the Nazi fold on the one hand and into the Fascism of Mussolini on the other, found yet another factor militating against her integrity as a nation; the old idea that people speaking one language, no matter where they live should be brought into one geographical center—in this case Germany. To the question, "Will Germany get Austria," the speaker answered, "Yes, unless Austria can find markets for her products elsewhere."

Apropos of all world conditions today, Mrs. McMullen found propaganda, the attempting to put over any particular statement by telling only one side of the story, one of the most ominous influences that we have to deal with and it is very busy right now in France and even in Belgium where fascism is gaining a foothold. Yet the speaker considered Fascism as a passing phase of world history. Mussolini began with Fascism in Italy in times of prosperity but it will not hold its ground there if there comes a time when there is a lack of food.

Passing on to Soviet Russia, Mrs. McMullen was of the opinion that should it be true that the old G. P. U.—the secret police—with all of the attendant terrorism is actually being abolished it will be one of the finest things that has happened in Europe in a long, long time.

Finally coming back home to Washington, Mrs. McMullen spoke of the President having realized the need of rest and taking it. Congress thereupon went into "a huddle", carried through the Bonus to World War veterans and defeated other of the president's plans. However Mr. Roosevelt had returned, restored to vigor and with his usual cheerfulness, ready to do the best in a period of world history without precedent. He considers it a time which demands experiments, nor is he bound to any one policy if it proves to be undesirable. We must try to find the best way for all and keep on trying until it is found.

More than a half hour was devoted to discussion, following Mrs. McMullen's able address and her audience said goodbye to her and each other with regret.

The Missing Cubs

By MARY GRAHAM BONNER

It was such fun for Willy Nilly, the little man who lived with his animal friends in Puddle Muddle, to talk with Rip, the dog, Top Notch, the rooster, Jolly Bear and Honey Bear, Christopher Columbus Crow and the ducks about the circus which had been visiting them.

"They left lots of food behind," growled Jolly Bear hungrily and happily. "They were pleasant visitors."

"They agreed that I was a magnificent rooster," said Top Notch, "and they taught me many fine tricks."

"Oh, you're so vain, Top Notch," cawed Christopher Columbus Crow.

"Now, now, let's not get into any arguments," said Willy Nilly. "I must attend to my chores and do something about my sticking-out pointed ears. We've had lots of excitement but we must get back to our own work. While the circus was here it was too thrilling to think of anything else."

"I must get back to the cubs, Jupiter and Blacky," growled Honey Bear. "They were quite all right for me to leave for a short time, but now I must see the little dears and their lessons must be started."

Honey Bear walked lumberingly up to the cave, while the others began to plan what they would do first of all.

Suddenly they heard Honey Bear crying, and down from the cave she came now, hurrying for all she was worth.

"The cubs are gone! My Jupiter and my Blacky are not in the cave! Oh, I should never have left them!" she cried in distress.

POLITICS at Random

By BYRON PRICE
(Chief Of Bureau, The Associated Press, Washington)

NO OTHER feature of the revised Roosevelt legislative program is causing more puzzlement and confusion than the resurrected silver question.

The plain indications are that, for a second time since the present administration began, silver advocates and inflationists are getting out of hand, threatening to force the White House into steps it would rather avoid.

A year ago, when agitation for sweeping currency expansion grew too strong, Mr. Roosevelt was able to effect a compromise. He accepted a blanket grant of authority, permitting him to exercise almost unlimited power over monetary policy.

That satisfied the expansionists for the time being, although some of them suspected the President never really intended to exercise, except sparingly, the new powers thus thrust upon him.

The present revival of silver talk is based, by and large, on a contention that these powers should have been used more freely, particularly for the rehabilitation of silver. The effort is to make mandatory some of the things merely authorized last year.

* * *

Silver Strength Gets Bow

UP TO a few weeks ago, the administration believed it could prevent this movement from becoming serious at this session of congress.

During the President's absence on vacation, however, the silver advocates in the house suddenly became very active. So far as appeared, the democratic house leadership not only did nothing to head off the movement, but actually gave it encouragement.

It was the one subject on which Mr. Roosevelt, as he surveyed the wreckage of his legislative program on his return to Washington, showed a willingness to make concessions. That was an undeniable recognition of the strength of the silverites.

The administration problem now is, again, to pacify the expansionists, and at the same time defeat mandatory action along any line which the President would consider unsound.

The whole administration financial program, with its continuation of orthodox liberty bond refunding, is geared to an expectation that there will be no violent changes in the monetary situation during the next few months.

* * *

Rival Plans May Aid F. D. R.

THE confusion of the whole situation is increased by the fact the silver question really is several questions rolled into one.

One bill, already passed by the house, provides that silver shall be accepted at a premium when paid over in foreign countries for American agricultural exports.

From that, which would involve only a comparatively small amount of currency, the proposals of the expansionists range all the way up to free coinage at 16 to 1 and "greenback" issues running into the billions.

Even the move for a conference of all the various silver factions has not entirely clarified the picture. In the end, this may greatly strengthen the hand of the administration.

If the rival plans advanced can be brought into sufficiently active conflict with one another, the result might be that they would kill each other off and permit Mr. Roosevelt to hold legislative action within narrow limits.

WASHINGTON HEADLINERS

No. 13—Davis of the AAA: A Farm Expert Who "Savvies Politics"

This is the thirteenth article in a daily series sketching the personalities behind the "big names" in Washington.

By STEPHEN McDONOUGH

Washington (AP)—A big sign reading "Chester C. Davis, expert," would identify properly the man who directs the agricultural adjustment administration.

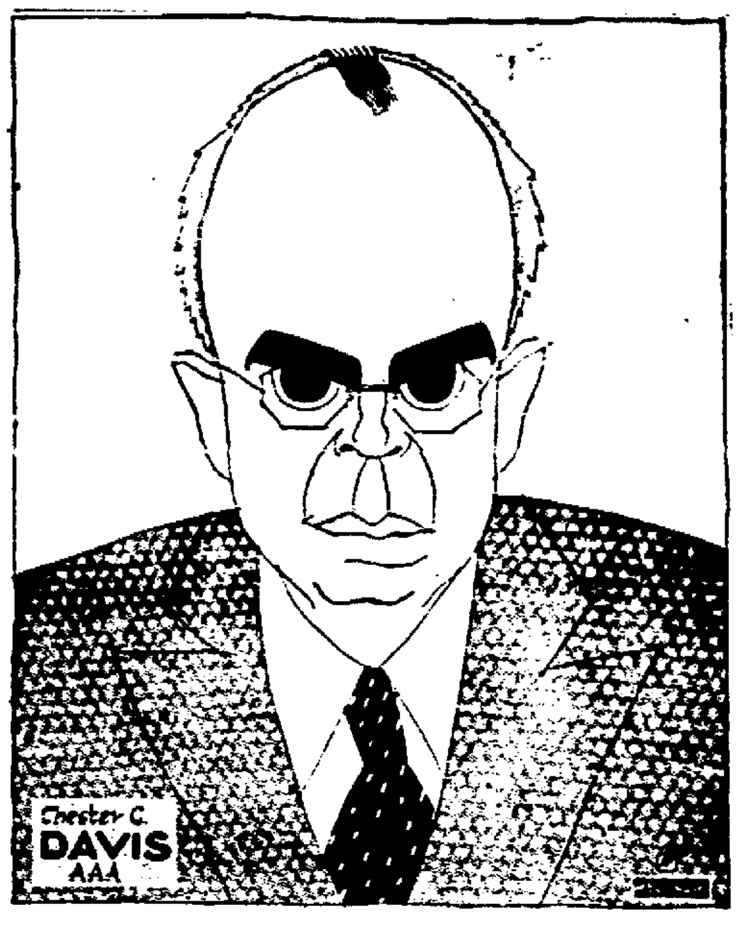
The 47-year-old Iowan had been "experting" in social and economic problems long before he succeeded George N. Peek as administrator of emergency measures for America's six million farmers.

Now he "experts" in placating members of congress when they get "riled up" over something in the farm program, in the spending of millions of dollars each month and in directing the activities of 15,000 farm administration workers.

Davis confesses frankly that much of the farm program is so experimental in nature that no one can predict what it will accomplish. Like any scientist, however, he has a definite objective in view and is willing to try almost any method to accomplish it.



Solicitude For Staff

In a variety of ways Davis has been working on farmers' problems ever since his graduation from Grinnell college in Iowa. He edited newspapers in South Dakota and Montana, was agricultural commissioner of Montana, grain cooperative leader and a backer of the McNary-Haugen bill.

One outstanding personal trait of the administrator is his solicitude for members of his staff. Side-stepping vacations for himself, he watches closely the health of those under him and has been known to order an AAA worker to "beat it and don't show up again for a week."

Davis is a baseball, football and basketball fan, and he plays a good game of handball. Like his chief, Secretary Wallace, he enjoys hiking, and in Montana he was known as a skillful mountain climber.

He married a Montana girl and has two sons, both in high school.

"As a Farmer"

He lives in nearby Maryland and drives to work, arriving early and leaving after most of the other offices in the agriculture department are dark.

Because of his long experience as a farm worker and farm owner, as well as his knowledge of statistics and economics, Davis does not have implicit faith in theories. Frequently he upsets his advisers by callenging conclusions they draw from charts and graphs.

"It won't work," he tells them. "As a farmer, I know better."

Casual acquaintances consider Davis one of the most serious men in Washington. But he has a deep sense of humor, is a good story-teller and an even vetter listener.

He "Savvies Politics"

No schedule drafted by his office force stands up longer than an hour. Absorbed in a conversation, he loses track of time; the waiting list in his outer office grows and his secretaries wring their hands.

The back door of his office is both a private entrance and an escape hatch when a trip through the outer office would mean an hour's delay going to and from conferences. However, he considers sealing it up because too many of his associates have learned the avenue.

In a group usually regarded as devoid of politicians, Davis is the link between the AAA and the lawmakers on capitol hill when misunderstadings arise. As one of his staff remarked, he "savvies politics," and enjoys "putting across" the farm program to congress.

Tomorrow—Senator Borah.

Resentment Grows On Killing of School Boy

Deputies Fired Upon Youth Who Ran From Them With Package Containing Decoy Ransom—Feeling Exists Shooting Was Unnecessary.

Middleport, N. Y., April 23 (AP).—Authorities investigating a bold extortion scheme and the killing of 17-year-old Edwin Bateman by deputy sheriffs while allegedly carrying out the plot, today found a growing resentment against the shooting of the Middleport High School sophomore, although the officers said they fired high so as to frighten the youth into surrender as he fled with a decoy ransom.

Joseph Bateman, Edwin's father, said his son left home at 9 o'clock Saturday night saying he was going to a dance. Bateman, employed nights, was at work when the boy was shot.

"There is no reason why the boy should have done anything like this," Mr. Bateman said. "He was a good boy, no better, no worse than a lot of other boys. It seems to me that the deputy sheriffs at least could have spared his life. I understand there were eight of them and that they had the place surrounded. Couldn't they have captured him?"

Four of the deputies admitted discharging their guns. It has not been determined who fired the fatal shot.

The alleged extortion plot was directed against Roy Wheeler, Middleport coal merchant. He receeived two letters threatening the safety of his son Roy Jr., unless he paid $5,600.

Wheeler notified the sheriff and a decoy package was placed at the spot designated by the letters, on the loading platform of the Jackson warehouse, diagonally across Orchard street from the Bateman home.

Young Bateman, the deputies allege, crept up to the platform, grabbed the decoy package and ran. They called upon him to surrender and fired over his head when he did not stop.

In his flight, Bateman crossed Orchard street and ran between two houses a short distance from his home. He was found dead in front of a garage at the rear of one of the houses. An autopsy performed by Coroner F. A. Kittinger, of Lockport, disclosed that the boy had been hit by five shotguns, one over the heart causing death.

A previous attempt to kidnap the Wheeler boy failed, Mr. Wheeler disclosed today, the lad fighting off his attackers and out-distancing them in a race to his home. This was referred to in one of the letters given to the sheriff in connection with the second threat. It read:

"We failed in the first attempt to kidnap your child, but the next time we won't fail to get him, for we will kill him if you do not have the $5,600 on Saturday night."

UPSET STOMACH, Mr. Peter Fisher?

*Dr. K— is a well known New York physician, whose signed statement is on record in New York. We omit his name out of courtesy to the accepted custom of the medical profession.

"Here's how to FIX THAT!"

DR. K——* TELLS NEW YORK PHOTOGRAPHER

If you are bothered by periodic upset stomach or indigestion . . . remove the real cause and get positive relief quickly! That is the advice of Dr. K——!

When you are made miserable by an upset stomach or indigestion . . . you'll be grateful for what we tell you here . . . for the quick sure relief we offer you!

Doctors agree that one of the commonest causes of these troubles is accumulated wastes that clog the intestines (a condition that often follows indiscretions in eating and drinking).

These wastes secrete poisons which are carried by your blood stream to your stomach and all other parts of your body. Also, pressure is exerted on your intestinal nerves . . . and often you get one of those nagging sick headaches.

For quick, positive relief you must rid the system of these clogging wastes. And for nearly forty years doctors have prescribed Sal Hepatica as the safe, sure, faster way to do this. For Sal Hepatica is utterly different from other types of laxatives in these four vital respects:

Why Sal Hepatica is Different—More Efficient

1. It is a Mineral Salt Laxative that not only flushes the system clear of poisonous wastes, but tends to aid Nature in restoring the natural balance of body fluids.

2. Its action results from osmosis (a gentle, thorough flushing) and not from irritation.

3. It acts promptly. No hours of waiting.

4. No "dragged-out" feeling afterwards—because Sal Hepatica does not deplete the body tissues of fluid.

So take Sal Hepatica at the first sign of clogged intestines. And thus aid Nature to keep you free from colds, grippe, rheumatic pains, upset stomach, headaches and other common troubles.

Once Is Enough

Los Angeles—One night in the ring with Jack Dempsey was enough for Lloyd B. Davis, giant negro police officer, and municipal judge Isadore Dockweiler agreed with him.

Davis was awarded $35 judgment against Jack Kearns, former Dempsey manager, for the one night stand three years ago.

Kearns refused to pay him, Davis said, because he would not work out the week for which he was hired.

"One night against that man is enough for anybody," asserted Davis.

Customers for Cupid

Los Angeles—Wedding bells will ring for most of the co-eds of the University of California at Los Angeles—that is, if present plans work out.

Of the 200 girl students on the university campus, 75 per cent answered in a questionnaire that they prefer marriage to a career.

Some Sausage

Garmisch-Partenkirchen, Germany—A sausage proved to be good robbery insurance for Alois Lechleitner.

Walking home late at night, Lechleitner was attacked by a robber. Wielding his sausage, Lechleitner broke the robber's knife and thumped him on the head.

The sausage withstood the rough treatment, but not the robber, who was knocked unconscious and surrendered to the police.

Four Kings

Montreal—King George V, the fourth English sovereign under whom she has lived, sent this message to Mrs. A. B. Buchanan of Montreal:

"The king and queen send you hearty congratulations and best wishes on your hundredth birthday."

Mrs. Buchanan was born April 22, 1834, in Ireland.

Little Prompter

Falls City, Neb.—Three-year-old Wilfred Ebel's camera eye forced his daddy into a stage situation the script didn't cover.

Appearing in a parish play at St. Paul's Evangelical Lutheran Church, the father, Louis Ebel, followed the script closely when he "misplaced" his cigaret case and then asked: "Now where can I have laid my cigaret case?"

"It's on the table under those sacks, Daddy," piped Wilfred proudly from his orchestra seat.

Indian Foe Honored

Cornplanter was the name given to a Seneca Indian, who was one of the deadliest foes of the whites during the Revolutionary days, but who came later to be a great friend of the whites. He was a half breed, his father having been a white man, John Abeel, a trader. He fought against the English at the time of Braddock's disastrous defeat and carried on his warfare against the Revolutionists. He was known as an honorable man despite his opposition to the settlers and Pennsylvania eventually erected a monument to his memory.

Industrial Home Gift Has Story

On Saturday, April 21, Frank Vertetis of Kingston called at "The Industrial Home", 77 East Chester street, and left the sum of fifty dollars.

There is an interesting story connected with this gift. About forty (40) years ago a society was organized at East Kingston called "The Louis Kossuth Sick and Aid Society". A clause in its constitution provided in case the society disbanded or the membership consisted of only five members the money in the treasury was to be given to "The Children's Home".

The membership has now been reduced to five members, Leo Vertetis and his brother, Frank Vertetis, the other three members having moved away.

The first president of the society was the father of Leo and Frank Vertetis and the last president was Leo Vertetis.

The Board of Managers of the Industrial Home gratefully acknowledge this gift.

Macon Crosses U.S. To Florida in 54 Hours

Miami, Fla., April 23 (AP)—Proud of this fast cruise across the continent, officers and men of the naval dirigible Macon were busy today reconditioning the huge craft for the Carribean war games.

The Macon moored here at 7:12 p. m. (E. S. T.) yesterday after a 54-hour flight from Sunnyvale, Calif., which Commander A. H. Dresel said was probably a new transcontinental record for lighter-than-air craft.

The helium supply is to be replenished and the entire ship reconditioned before the Macon is released from its mast about May 5 to join the fleet near the Canal Zone.

Landing here a short time before the arrival of the Macon was Rear Admiral E. J. King, chief of naval aeronautics, who is to confer with [illegible] Admiral King said, [illegible] significance. He flew here from Washington.

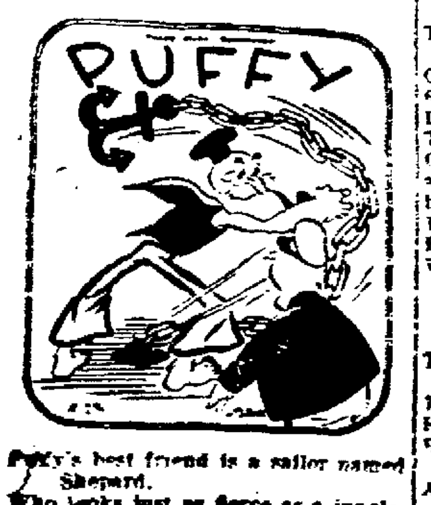
Holland Under Water

Ages ago nearly the entire area of present-day Holland was under water, with here and there a small island rearing its crown above the waves. The early "Batavians," as they were called, realizing the fertility of the soil which was being inundated at stated periods, devised means of reclaiming small areas of land by imitating the beaver. They constructed primitive dams and dikes to hold back the water which they pumped by equally primitive methods from their small "polders," gradually enlarging these areas, until about 8,000 square miles, of a total land area of 12,000 square miles, has been conquered from the sea.

Kiss Was a Crime

In the Seventeenth century to kiss either wife or children on a Sunday was an indictable offense. There is an instance of a sailor who returned on a Sunday from a three years' voyage being set in the stocks for not waiting until Monday before saluting his wife.



Puffy's best friend is a sailor named Shepard,
Who looks just as fierce as a jungle-bred leopard;
He's Puffy's protector aboard the big liner—
His muscles are fine, but his mustache is finer.

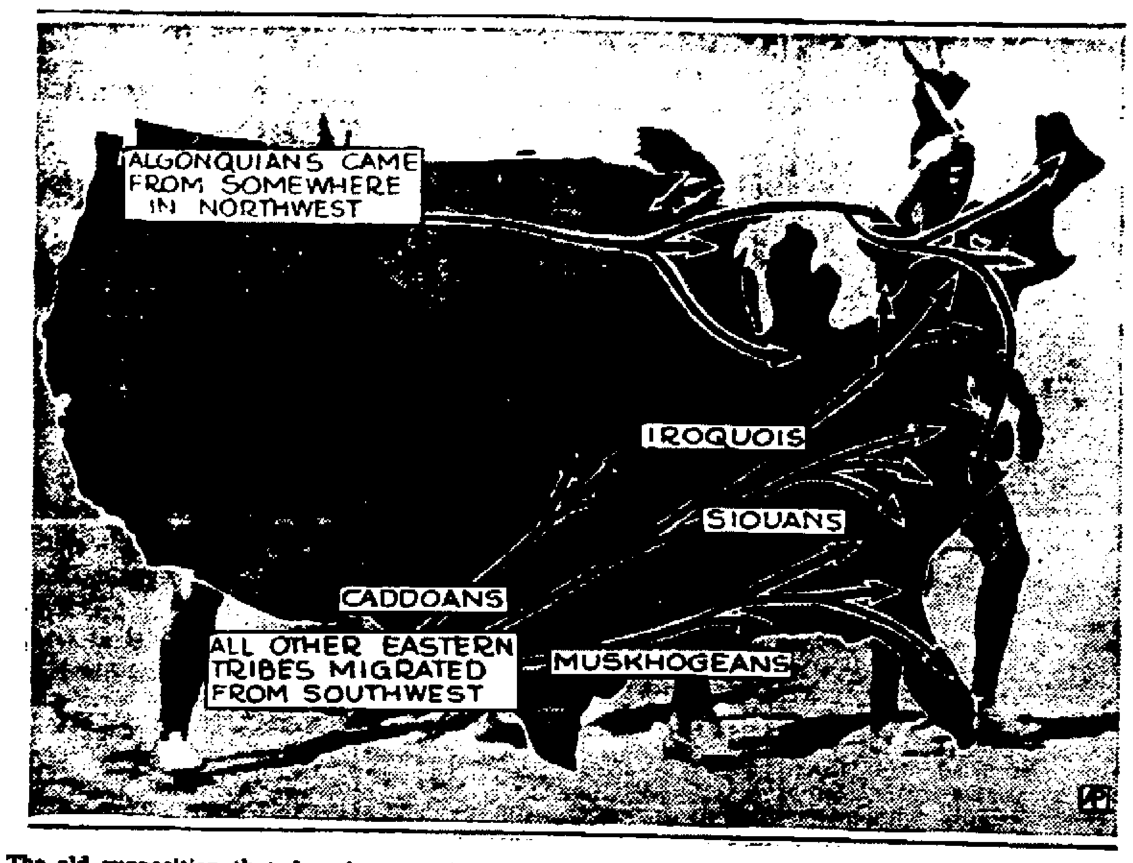
Prehistoric Pioneers In America Left West To Push 'Eastward Ho!'



ALGONQUIANS CAME FROM SOMEWHERE IN NORTHWEST
IROQUOIS
SIOUANS
CADDOANS
ALL OTHER EASTERN TRIBES MIGRATED FROM SOUTHWEST
MUSKHOGEANS

The old supposition that America was pioneered by migrations moving westward from the Atlantic coast is upset by a map prepared for the Smithsonian institution by David I. Bushnell, Jr. It shows the routes followed by prehistoric Indians as they moved slowly eastward across a continent theretofore untouched by human feet. Indian remains found buried in the soil furnished the basis for the map.

By F. B. COLTON

(Associated Press Science Writer)

Washington (AP)—America's first pioneers were westerners who pushed eastward to the Atlantic Ocean across a continent that probably never before had seen a human being.

There is shown by a new map of prehistoric migrations that were sweeping slowly across what is now the United States when America was unheard of and the more famous migrations of the old world were causing empires there to topple. It has just been published by the Smithsonian institution.

Most From Southwest.

The hordes migrating from Pacific to Atlantic, reversing the saying that "westward the course of empire takes its way," were the ancestors of the Indians found east of the Mississippi river by the first white settlers. They opened up a country which until then, it is believed, no man had seen, and the transcontinental routes they followed have just been charted for the first time by David I. Bushnell, Jr.

All except one of the Indian tribes found by the white men between the Atlantic and the Mississippi were originally from the far southwest, says Bushnell. They had pushed eastward and northward slowly through a period that lasted centuries or perhaps thousands of years. The great Algonquian tribes, met by the French and English when they settled Canada, New England and the north Atlantic seaboard, however, had come in from the northwest.

Skirting the Great Lakes, the Algonquins were marching south, perhaps in search of a milder home, when they met an incoming wave of Siouan tribesmen from the southwest. They were pushed back, and finally forced to settle in the comparatively rigorous country of the northeast.

The trails they followed from ocean to ocean stretch backward through distant ages around the northern shores of the Pacific to Asia. Most scientists now agree that Asiatic tribes crossed Bering strait to populate America. The trail has been followed in many ancient burial grounds and abandoned village sites from Siberia down the Alaskan coast.

Remains Give Clew.

The region that now is Kentucky and Tennessee was the great crossroads of these ancient migrations eastward, Bushnell believes. It played a role in the ancient history of North America much like that of Asia Minor in the old war, which was the junction of many migrations in the Mediterranean region.

The great Indian groups whose migrations are traced on Bushnell's map include, besides the Algonquins, the Siouans who pushed them north and occupied Virginia and the Carolinas, the Iroquois, noted later as the powerful "Six Nations", who moved into the region around Lakes Erie and Ontario, the Muskhogeans of the gulf states and the Caddoans, who stayed west of the Mississippi.

The migration map was prepared from evidences of movements gathered from many Indian remains scattered over the entire area on the map.

Buckwheat Traced 2,000 Years

Buckwheat cakes, good old stand-by of the breakfast and luncheon table generally regarded to be as 100 per cent American and native as anything could be, are, it turns out, actually an ancient Tibetan dish. Researches in connection with the early history, origin and distribution of the world's cultivated and useful plants, trace buckwheat back to Asia and indicate that it was there cultivated for at least 2,000 years. The Tibetans and other mountain tribes related to them, living in the Himalaya region, were the original buckwheat cultivators and the first buckwheat cake eaters. They produced a complete buckwheat culture complex, grinding the buckwheat into flour and making the flour into cakes, gruel and beer. They even utilized the straw of the plant as fodder in the winter. Among some of these hill tribes buckwheat still forms the principal crop and the staff of life.

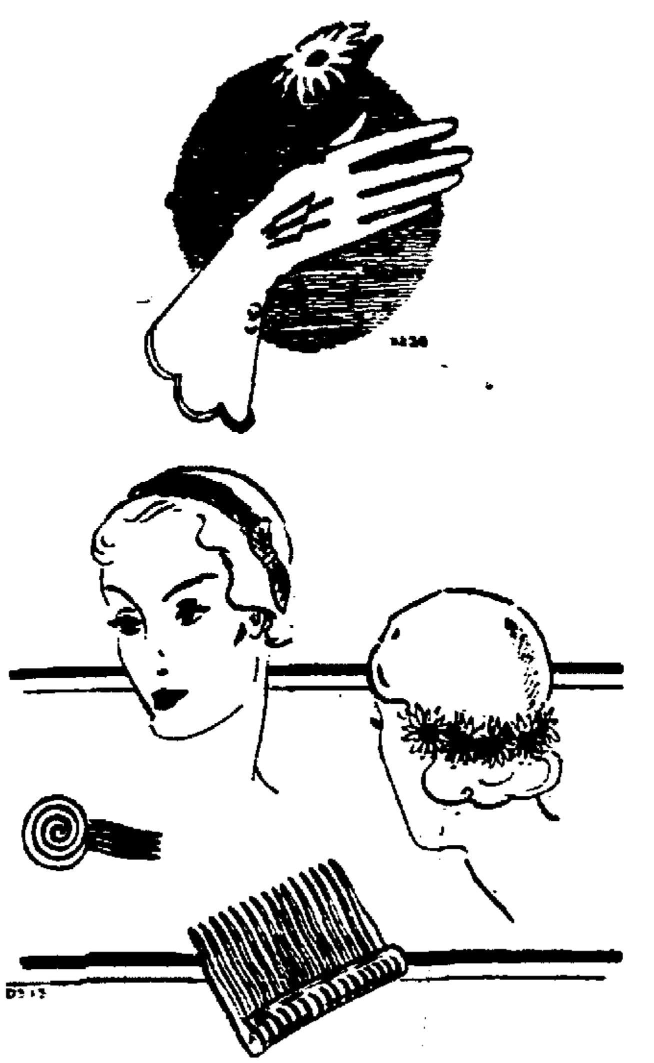
FASHIONS By ELEANOR GUNN

The Hair and the Tortoise Comb



Copyright, 1934, by Fairchild.

At top is a new fabric glove which has a generous slip-on length scalloped and self-finished and tiny twin button trimming at the side.

Among the new things which are being done with hair ornaments are seen the combs and the bandeaux sketched here. At the top left, a flexible halo of plastic material is adjustable, and finished with a barrett catch, the design is a braided pattern. The daisies, shown in the other model sketched, worn across the back of the head, are real fabric flowers set onto a ribbon covered celluloid band.

The small comb at the lower left, in tortoise shell colorings and the roll comb which fits into the side or side back of the coiffure, in gay sports colors, are two of the smaller novelties being introduced.

A Cable from the Riviera

New York—With Miami and Palm Beach, the far flung beaches on the Pacific, and the Riviera to guide our faltering footsteps toward summer fashions we hardly need to speculate as to what's what. We should know. After all, it is such pleasure spots that fashions are born.

Here is a transcript of a cable recently received telling of what fashions are having their place in the sun on the Riviera.

"Fashions worn on the Riviera emphasize white, while soft blue and yellow were other favorites during the day.

"Lelong's white pique suit, with jacket buttoned all the way up the front was seen, and ensembles in white fancy silk were other choices.

"A great deal of linen appeared, in plain for dresses and plaid for three-quarter coats and short jackets.

"Neat suits of striped alpaca were also included.

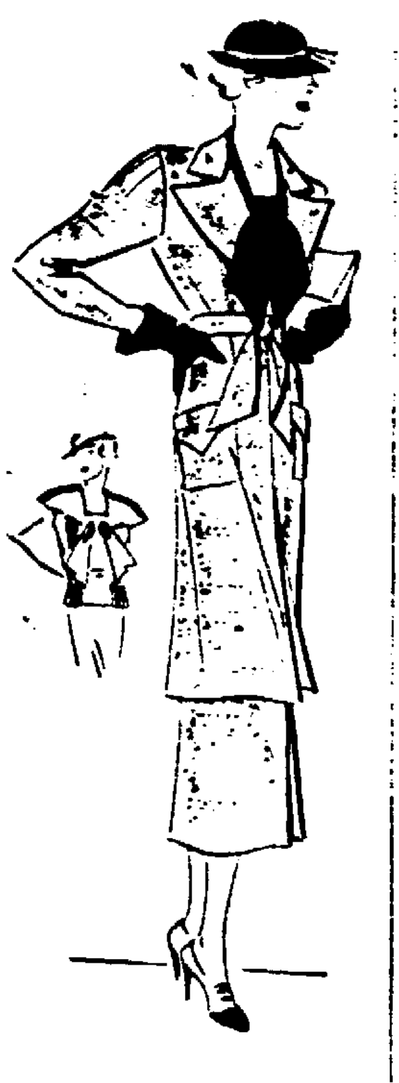
"Hats highlight flat bretons and sailors of Panama, linen and paillasson, trimmed with colored bouquets. Gaby Mono's large nickel buckle, and linen ribbons were other trimmings observed in millinery.

"For evening there were many gowns of flat crepe printed in large white or colored flowers, made with a deep back decollete.

"Molyneux frock of pink satin shot with gold was worn with a short chiffon capelet trimmed with shaded pink ostrich feathers. An outstanding coat was developed in faille printed in large bouquets of poppies."

Molyneux is an important personage especially this season for it was he who set the huge cartwheels in motion and it is this gallant captain who now tosses a sombrero into the ring. Why not? Aren't some of our strongest influences Mexican, in the color sense anyway? But it happens that the Chinese intrigue Molyneaux. The Oriental note seems to be gaining in favor which is natural now that we are again interested in embroidery. There are any number of embroidered linens reported worn.

LINEN, 1934 MODEL



Copyright, 1934, by Fairchild

The costume introduces a coat that is in three-quarter length, and belted, with notchers revers and swagger pockets important. The blouse is in printed handkerchief linen. The linen used in the jacket and skirt is effective, suggesting a tweed.

HAPPY RETURNS!

This week marks the birthday of the first American newspaper.

● ●

JOHN CAMPBELL, colonial postmaster of Boston, certainly set a good example in the liberal use of the mails.

Campbell corresponded regularly with all the Colonial Governors of New England, keeping them posted on Boston news. So regular and voluminous was this correspondence that Campbell's letters finally emerged in the form of a printed pamphlet called "The Boston News Letter." And this was the first regularly and continuously published newspaper in America, appearing weekly from the last week in April, 1704, to the signing of the Declaration of Independence.

The newspaper carried advertisements . . . from its very first issue! And this advertising, telling the reader where to obtain the goods that he sought for his home or his farm or his business, lifted the mere friendly chronicle of village affairs into the realm of a service to the community. The news-letters, plus advertising, became a helpful, informative, and educational institution.

Today, as in 1704, and all the years between, the advertisements are your guide-posts to honest, dependable merchandise at a fair price.

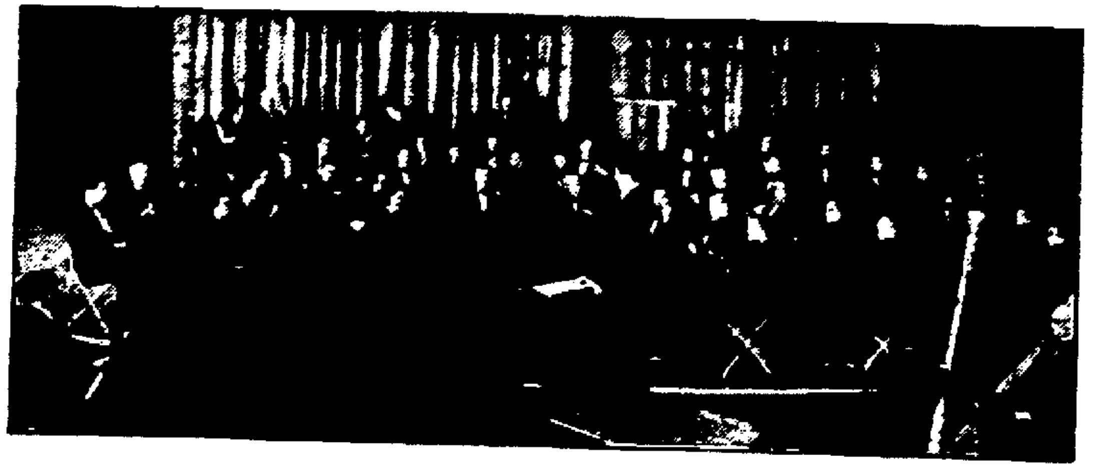
Noted Conductor Praises Crooks' Radio Singing



William Daly conducting the orchestra which accompanies Richard Crooks.

William Daly, noted conductor, who has furnished an accompaniment for practically all the great singers who have appeared before the mike, pays an unusual tribute to Richard Crooks. He says the young tenor's technique and even the type of songs he sings are ideal for the radio.

Besides, Daly points out that Crooks has made a study of making records and few tenors have made as many high grade records for America. In addition he has made many and varied records for an English phonograph company.

In radio he watches the control man and studies the art of broadcasting, which is also important, says Daly. Crooks knows that some songs that sound good in concert are hard to understand over the radio or are made indistinct by the original accompaniment and he tries to avoid these. Fortunately requests from the public which make up his programs are usually the type that make good radio numbers, under Daly's skillful arrangement and direction.

On his program Monday, April 23, at 8:30 p. m. over the NBC—WEAF Network, Crooks will sing "I'll Take You Home Again Kathleen" by Westendorf; "Toselli's Serenade"; "Tell Me Tonight" from the English picture review "Be Mine Tonight"; and "Una Furtiva Lagrima" from "Elixir of Love" by Donizetti. Daly's orchestra will play "Scherzo" from Saint Saens' "Piano Concerto," and Harvey S. Firestone, Jr., will give another brief talk in his series on "The Story of Transportation."

Hopes Women Will Adopt This Habit As Well as Men

Glass of hot water each morning helps us look and feel clean, sweet, fresh.

Happy, bright, alert—vigorous and vivacious—a good clear skin; a natural, rosy complexion and freedom from illness are assured only by clean, healthy blood. If only every woman and likewise every man could realize the wonders of the morning inside bath, what a gratifying change would take place.

Instead of the thousands of sickly, anaemic-looking men, women and girls with pasty or muddy complexions; instead of the multitudes of "nerve wrecks," "rundowns," "brain fags" and pessimists we should see a virile, optimistic throng of rosy-cheeked people everywhere.

An inside bath is had by drinking, each morning before breakfast, a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it to wash from the stomach, liver, kidneys and ten yards of bowels the previous day's indigestible waste, sour fermentations and poisons, thus cleansing, sweetening and freshening the entire alimentary canal before putting more food into the stomach.

Those subject to sick headache, biliousness, nasty breath, rheumatism, colds; and particularly those who have a pallid, sallow complexion and who are constipated very often, are urged to obtain a quarter pound of limestone phosphate at the drug store which will cost but a trifle but is sufficient to demonstrate the quick and remarkable change in both health and appearance awaiting those who practice internal sanitation. We must remember that inside cleanliness is more important than outside, because the skin does not absorb impurities to contaminate the blood, while the pores in the thirty feet of bowels do.—Adv.

New York, April 23.—Bees as buzzing broadcasters do not set well with the announcers of the staff of WJSV, CBS station at Washington. Already each one has entered his important reasons why he shouldn't be called on to announce such a program.

That notwithstanding, plans are going right ahead for the bees. They are actually to be brought into the studio by James I. Hableton of the Federal Department of Agriculture with the hope that they will buzz a song for the microphone when he conducts a program about the honeymakers for WABC-CBS on May 16.

So far the only trouble has been to find a bee fearless announcer.

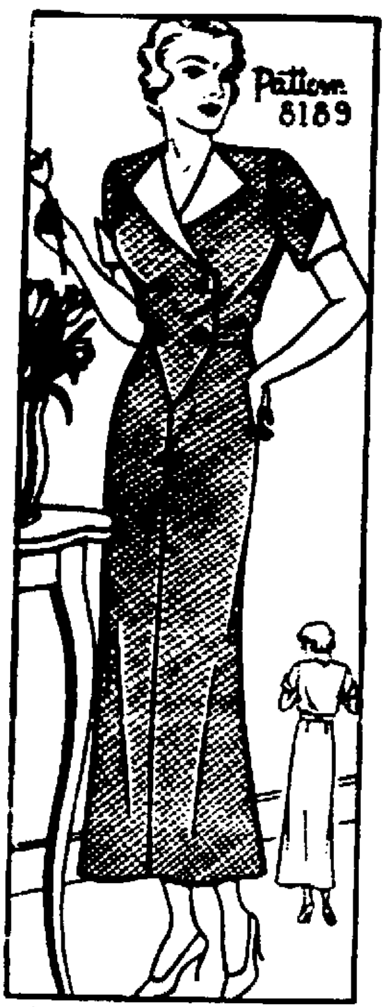
Amortized, Amortization

In England and America amortized is pronounced a-mor-tized, a as in about, o as in nor, i as in habit, accent on the second syllable. Some authorities permit the sound of i as in pine, retaining the accent as above. The pronunciation of amortization is a-mor"ti-ze'shun—a as in about, o as in nor, i as in habit, e as in prey, u as in minute, with the primary accent shifted to the fourth syllable, and a secondary accent on the second.—Literary Digest.

No One-Tusk Elephants

There is no species of elephant with only one tusk. In some instances one of the tusks may be broken in combat or in uprooting trees; very often one tusk is smaller and thinner than the other. The narwhal, a whale sometimes called the "sea unicorn," as a rule has one long spiral tusk, though occasional specimens have two tusks.

OUR DAILY PATTERN.



A Slenderizing House Frock.

8189. House frocks, to be attractive and useful, must be neat, simple and large enough for freedom of movement. The frock pictured here is unusually clever in line and cut for a slenderizing affect while still allowing plenty of freedom. The blouse buttoned in the front and the short sleeves and small revers are most smart and becoming and the seam at center front of the skirt introduces sufficient width for comfort.

Percale, gingham, or seersucker are suggestions for material with cuffs and revers of white pique or linen. Buttons could be in bright contrast.

Designed in sizes: 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, 46, 48, 50 and 52. Size 44 requires 4 yards of 35 inch material with ⅝ yard contrasting.

Faustin Elie Soulouque Ruled Haitian Republic

Faustin Elie Soulouque, who reigned as Faustin I from 1849 to 1858, was a full-blooded negro. He was elected president of the Haitian republic by mulatto politicians who believed he would be a pliable tool. He was sixty three years old, and though he bore the title of general he was a man of no prominence. Shortly after his election Soulouque amazed his sponsors by manifesting entire independence, and then surprised the world by formally proclaiming himself emperor and providing a gorgeous and extravagant coronation for himself and his wife, "the Empress Adelina."

Solouque was a man of meager ability and was decisively defeated in two wars against the neighbor republic of Santo Domingo. After he was dethroned in 1858 and exiled to Jamaica the republic was re-established. Soulouque was eventually permitted to return to Haiti to die.

The first emperor of Haiti was Jean Jacques Dessalines, who was born an African savage and brought to Haiti as a slave. He completed the liberation of Haiti begun by Toussaint l'Ouverture and reigned as Emperor Jacques I from 1804 to 1806. The only other Haitian monarch was the much abler Henri Christophe who scorned the imperial title and ruled despotically but beneficially as king.

Talks to Parents

A Doubtful Pleasure

By BROOKE PETERS CHURCH

Mrs Thomas was in the habit of reading to her children every day. She chose excellent books, and generally the reading hour should have been very enjoyable.

But before she started she always questioned her audience as to what she had read the day before, and if the children did not at once remember, was apt to close the book and refuse to go on.

The result was that the hour which should have been so delightful was soon positively unpopular among the youngsters, and they listened to the reading with only perfunctory attention.

If children are to enjoy books and reading aloud the element of duty and edification must be eliminated. Perhaps they will not always remember what has gone before, but if so, the fault lies not in the child but in the reader or the choice of the book. Sometimes, of course, a child's attention wanders and he misses something of importance. But he is far more apt to turn back and look up the connecting link or to inquire about it if left to himself than if examined and reproved for lack of interest.

If a parent really wishes to introduce a child to the best in literature she can accomplish the purpose best by making the classics a joy rather than a duty. It is just the element of work connected with them which makes them so distasteful to the child who is obliged to read them in school, and the chief reason for reading them to him is to take them out of the scholastic atmosphere and make them recreation.

The school hours comprise enough formal education for any child, and whatever else is necessary is much more easily and effectively instilled by suggestion and unconscious guidance than by direct teaching.

HOLLYWOOD SIGHTS and SOUNDS

By ROBBIN COONS

HOLLYWOOD—Even "new-born baby stars" can survey the Hollywood romantic scene, strewn with the wreckage of many movie marriages, with some cynicism. Some of them firmly believe it is foolhardy for an actress to attempt marriage and a career at the same time. Others are inclined to believe it can be done—even in Hollywood.

A poll of the girls elected as possible stars of the future by Wampas, the film publicity men's organization, reveals also that opinions are divided on another question: Should an actress marry "in the profession" or choose someone from another walk of life?

Dorothy Drake, who is 18, thinks a mutual professional interest helps to make marriage a success; hence—if she were minded to marry—she would choose an actor or someone in pictures as her mate.

"It Can Be Done"

"It can be done," agrees Jacqueline Wells. "But it requires plenty of the spirit of give-and-take, and the success of the marriage would depend on the individuals concerned. I think that an actress' marriage should work out better if a non-professional husband is chosen, although circumstances would alter cases."

GiGi Parrish is married to Dillwyn Parrish, a writer, and is sure her marriage and her career can survive.

"If it's a compatible marriage," she generalizes, "in which both husband and wife have mutual interests and understanding, there's no reason for failure."

Can't Mix Careers

But Helene Cohan, daughter of the famous stage actor, George M. Cohan, is equally emphatic in her views:

"Both acting and marriage are careers," she says, "and I think it is impossible to keep your mind on two careers at the same time. I would marry a non-professional by all means—if I married."

Lu Anne Meredith's opinion is that success of a film marriage would depend on "how true and sincere you are about both the marriage and the career." She would let love guide the choice of a mate.

Lucille Lund believes the success of marriage depends on the individuals, whether in Hollywood or Kalamazoo.

Need Level Head

"If I were thinking of marriage," she declares, "I think I would choose a non-professional husband. In this business one tends to lose equilibrium because of the strain involved, so there should be one level-headed person in the family to maintain balance."

Actors don't appeal to Ann Hovey, but she thinks a movie marriage can be as successful as any other kind.

Judith Arlen agrees with Helene Cohan that marriage is a career in itself, and she personally wouldn't try to mix it with films. But if she did, she says, she'd marry someone outside of pictures.

Let Love Dictate

Betty Bryson, who has been married and divorced, is positive that marriage and a career—taken together—lead to marital failure. In choosing another husband, if she were choosing one, she would let love dictate the choice.

Jean Gale, who soon is getting a divorce, shares Betty's views.

"You have to concentrate either on marriage or on the career," she says. "I want to concentrate on the career."

Mary Kornman, one of the "alternate baby stars," was the bride among the nominees. She is sure her marriage to Leo Tovar, film cameraman, will be a success.

"Career and marriage can mix if you don't take the career too seriously," she says.

At The Theatres

Today

Kingston: "Wonder Bar." Extravagant settings, grand music, a stage full of pretty girls, some swell dance numbers plus Al Jolson, Dolores Del Rio, Ricardo Gortez, Kay Francis, Dick Powell, Hugh Herbert, Ruth Donnelly, Hal LeRoy and Guy Kibbee, all conspire to make this one of the bigger and better musical comedy offerings now being shown. The action centers at the Wonder Bar in Paris, with Al Jolson the head man. He is in love with a dancer in his show, and this same dancer is in love with a gigolo. Before the thing is straightened out, there is a stabbing, a planned elopement, and when it is all over, Mr. Jolson still fails to win the girl he adores. The plot, however, is the smallest part of the show. It's the beautifully staged dances, the choruses, the songs, the gayety and comedy that has been woven into the action. And of course there is only one Al Jolson with his mannerisms and his own peculiar style of getting his songs over to his audience. Although the cast is filled with big names, all of them, with the exception of Jolson, seem to be more or less in roles which give them small opportunity to display their dramatic talent.

Orpheum: "Carolina." A story of the old south, with all of its charm and hospitality and gentle romance. What with excellent direction and a group of actors of recognized dramatic skill, this talkie radiates reality and interest. Janet Gaynor, in the role of the little northern girl who wins the heart of a wealthy, titled southerner over the opposition of his family and tradition, turns in another appealing performance. Lionel Barrymore just about steals the show with his usual flawless acting, and Robert Young, Mona Barrie, Richard Cromwell, Henrietta Crossman and Stepin Fetchit are featured in the cast. The scenery is beautiful, the costumes and settings authentic and the story moves along in an interesting manner throughout.

Broadway: "N. T. G.'s Paradise Club Revue" on the stage, and "Lazy River" on the screen. The famous New York city night club revue of N. T. G. is the main attraction at the Broadway, bringing a stage presentation which offers comedy, dancing and songs in entertaining variety. Ted Clair heads the cast as master of ceremonies, and in the supporting cast are the Sherr Brothers, Charles Abbott, Eddie Bisland, Joan Mona, Byrnes and Swanson, Murloy, McNeece and Ridge and a well trained and attractive chorus. "Lazy River" is a melodrama of the southland, with Robert Young, Jean Parker, Ted Healy and Nat Pendleton in the featured roles. Robert Young goes to Louisiana for the purpose of swindling an old lady out of her property, but he ends up by playing the hero. Excellent protography and scenery add greatly to the enjoyment of this film, and the capable work of the cast makes the show enjoyable screen fare. Ted Healy and Nat Pendleton come through with some swell comedy during the run of the picture.

2,000 Attended Y. W. C. A. Circus

Saturday afternoon, upward of 2,000 people—mostly children—hugely enjoyed the thrilling and wonderful Circus put on by the more than 200 girls of the Girl Reserve department of the Y. W. C. A. The performance had been directed by Miss Ottilia Riccobono during rehearsals and was directed by her on Saturday, while the music for dances was played by Miss Evelyn MacKinnon and Miss Riccobono. A host of friends made costumes, and helped in a hundred other ways to make the performance the huge success that it was.

Long before time for the Circus to begin, all of the 1,400 seats were taken, and then the little folks were allowed to sit on the fine new floor, looking like a great bed of crocuses, as soon as the Grand Parade was over.

All Girl Reserves were in that Grand Parade and grand it was, calling forth Ohs and Ahs and shouts of laughter as it circled round the big auditorium floor space reserved for the performance. Finally the performers not immediately active were seated on the large stage and with the background of the cyclorama they presented a fascinating picture for the grownups as well as the children.

This year, the Circus was presented as a sort of grand finale to both Alice in Wonderland and Looking Through the Looking Glass, a very clever conception.

The first feature on the program after the march was the "Alice-in-Wonderland" Birthday Party Song by the entire ensemble. Next came a dance by a chorus of Aliens in pretty light blue frocks and wearing just such frilly pinafores as Aliens did in the book by Lewis Carroll.

The appearance of the terrifying but gorgeous "Dutchess" (Jeanette Avery) heralded by the resplendent "Footman" (Anna Marie Manfor) called forth great applause, which grew greater as sweet Alice, herself—Jane Ball—was introduced and gave a remarkably graceful and fairy-like toe-dance. She remained in the picture throughout the entire performance.

From that moment through to the last number, one thing after another happened with such quick succession and such excellence as to be almost bewildering.

Following the arrival of wonderful "Guests," with a pretty solo dance by Alice Ward, came the "Three Pigs and the Big, Bad Wolf" (Patsy Caunitz, Mary MacPherson, Peggy Stist and Beverly Reese) who gave such a funny dance that everybody laughed heartily.

Right out of the book came the playing cards who gave another clever dance. Then it began to be a little more circusy with the appearance of The Clash and Clatter Band with the comical clowns, the huge Elephant and the Giraffe with the endless neck and other animals. How the children loved that number.

Another exceedingly clever number remarkably well done was the "Horses and Jockey" act. Incidentally there was a display of ingenuity in the making of the costumes that was decidedly noteworthy.

A solo dance was given by little Marion Bartlett calling forth much applause.

Back to wonderland went everybody, when there flapped onto the floor of the Auditorium a great flock of "Penguins," (Tri-Hi Girls) who did a very amusing, flippity-floppity dance, that had to be repeated.

So good was the Doll Act, with the solo dolly dance by Mildred Billyou, the Mixed Doll Dance, quite rigid and queer and the Rag Doll Dance by the soft, floundery rag dolls that every child loved, that the boys in the audience as well as the grown-ups applauded it almost as much as the girls.

A little more grown-up, very pretty and well-done was the Spanish Act, with the solo dance by Audrey Davis, and the snappy Toreador Dance by the Gaily togged Toreadors and the picturesque Tango number.

Once more the littlest folks got all excited over the Blue Bird Pie Act. First came the dance of the white clad bakers with their white caps and carrying their mixing spoons. Then they brought in a huge pie and very carefully set in onto the floor. As the cooks scampered away, the pie crust began to hump itself and before one could think, out hopped ever so many blue birds who gave a fine tap dance and then hopped back into the pie. But not for long, because out came ever so many kittens, black, white, black and white, yellow, gray, purring and washing their faces quite gently until they saw those blue birds. What a flying away there was of the blue birds and what a scammering of kittens after them. But still there were two white kittens not in on that game (Marion and Marjorie Bartlett) who came out and gave a kitten specialty dance.

The Cheerio Girls of the Y. W. Reserves are great favorites, and when they came out as Bell Hops they were given lots of applause. All together they gave a tap dance and in addition there were three solo dances by the Cheerio Girls, Evelyn MacKinnon, Ida Coons and Janet Ray, all enthusiastically applauded.

One of the funniest dances was the Goop Dance by the Live Y'er Club. Somebody at the Y. W. C. A. is a past master at making good Goops with wicked eyes and queer noses and square instead of round heads out of perfectly normal girls, and everyone got a great kick out of the kicking and dancing of those gorgeous Goops.

Well, even Alice in Wonderland and circuses have to come to an end, and this one was concluded with a fantastic "Chimney Sweep Dance" given by the Tri-Hi in which the dancers swept the floor all clean for the auditorium caretakers, swept each other and finally swept the whole big circus that had been such a delight to everyone right out of existence but not before Miss Riccobono and all other helpers had been gratefully thanked for all [illegible] helpfulness in making [illegible] success.

Financial and Commercial

New York, April 23 (AP).—Diffident financial markets were inclined to drift indecisively today as traders and investigators generally waited for news of a more stimulating character.

Word that the treasury would export gold if necessary in order to maintain the new parity of the dollar brought a recovery of the American unit in foreign exchange centers. Wheat dropped more than a cent a bushel, but got back most of this loss. Cotton and silver drooped. Rubber futures, on the other hand, edged up to new tops since 1926 as more reports were heard of imminent restrictive measures abroad. Bonds were irregular.

A few preferred stocks and specialties stepped out for sizeable advances. The Warren convertible issue got up 4, and Pressed Steel Car and Mailison Silk Preferreds were about 3 points each higher. Clark Equipment, Murray Body and Briggs Manufacturing were active and firm. Union Pacific, American Telephone and Southern Pacific were fractionally to around a point better. Santa Fe lost a point, however, and most of the other rails were easier. Auburn, Chrysler, General Motors and Nash sagged. U. S. Industrial Alcohol lost 2 and the remainder of the alcohol group was mildly reactionary. The metals and aircrafts were mixed and the utilities dull.

Just what, if anything, the administration will do to stem the ebbing tide of grain prices, was a matter of much discussion in the financial sector. The drop in commodities was believed to have furnished new ammunition for the Washington inflationists, but it was not thought their strength would be sufficient to overcome presidential opposition to any further currency expansion at this time.

N. T. G.'s Paradise Club Revue opened at the Broadway Theatre today and will continue to hold the stage on Tuesday. N. T. G. is a well-known radio personality and producer of daring revues, and the present show is said to be one of his best. Among those appearing in the revue are Miriam Bradford, Sherr Brothers, Joan Mona, Byrnes and Swanson, Mulroy, McNeece and Ridge, and a group of chorus girls that are both lovely and talented. Others in the cast are Charles Abbott and Eddie Bisland in "Stepping Out". The show played the week-end in Asbury Park, and according to word received here made a hit with the audience.

One of the added attractions of the show is Joan Mona, Russian ballerina. She is the daughter of two Russian refugees, and her parents were members of the "White Russian" nobility. Her Russian Dance of Passion is said to be exceptionally good. She is surrounded in the Paradise Club revue with a chorus of beautiful girls.

5 Petitioned Bridge be Built Following Flood

fair thing?" asked Ewig.

"I sure did" replied the witness.

"The entire proceedings?" asked Mr. Ewig.

"I would not say the entire proceedings but from what I hear I would not give much for it," replied the witness.

The witness said he had been a Republican committeeman from Denning since 1931 and that he would like to see Mr. Loughran retain his office.

"And anything you can do to help Mr. Loughran retain his job you would do?" asked Ewig.

"Anything fair," replied Mr. Gockel.

John H. Brooks, who said he had liven in Denning for about 50 years, was the first witness caled. He lives at Sundown. He was asked to tell about the condition of the country up in Denning and Mr. Ewig objected to the general question and the first vote of the morning was taken. Mr. Ewig was sustained 17 to 11.

He said his property was on the Rondout. It was a mile and a half up to the Van Etten property. In 1902 and 1903 Brooks said he had been town superintendent of the town and had worked the road crossing the Van Etten bridge. That had been town work. At one time he had repaired the west abutment to the bridge and the town of Denning paid.

He said he recalled the flood of August 28, 1928, on the Rondout. Damage was heavy and he knew of the Van Etten and Peekamoose bridges being carried out. The roads were also damaged.

Mr. Brooks said he had signed the petition to have the county rebuild all bridges in the town over 25 foot span as required by the present law. That was objected to and objection sustained 16 to 13. On the vote Supervisor Shults said the question was a perfectly proper one and he voted for the admission of the testimony. Supervisor Terwilliger asked if the witness was a member of the town board and was told no. He voted to sustain Ewig's objection.

Further objection was made to a second attempt to show that the witness and four others had requested by petition the county superintendent of highways to rebuild these bridges and again the question was objected to and sustained 16 to 13, Mr. Shults again voting to overrule.

He Maintained Bridge

Shown the paper he said he had signed it but could not identify the other signatures. Following that the Van Etten bridge was rebuilt he said. He did not know if a temporary bridge had first been built or not. In 1902 and 1903 the town maintained these bridges in the town. When he was town superintendent he maintained the Van Etten bridge which was a wooden bridge. The abutment on the west side was a log and stone affair. A bridge had been there since until the time of the freshet. There was also a road on the west or north side of the Rondout to Mr. Wright's place. He said he could recall, however, when the Wrights forded the creek. That was years ago, perhaps sixty. The Wright family was the only one on the north side of the creek to use the road. Capt. Griswold owned the farm at the bridge, then Coddington and later Van Etten.

Cross-examined, the witness said his place was on the Rondout and Sundown creeks and his place had been affected by the 1928 flood. The John H. Brooks bridge on the Sundown stream is at his place. It is a 30 foot bridge. It was repaired after the flood. It is a wooden bridge. People beyond his place use it to get over to the iron bridge.

During his time as town superintendent he said he had done work on the Van Etten bridge which existed at that time.

Asked if he had ever been authorized by the town board to do work on the bridge when he was town superintendent, he was not permitted to answer as Mr. Flemming objected to the question put by Mr. Ewig and for the first time in the proceeding the board sustained his objection to any question put by Mr. Ewig. Flemming's objection was sustained, 29 to 2.

He said Coddington owned the property now owned by Van Etten at the time he had made repairs to the bridge. Asked how he had come to make the repairs he said he heard the bridge needed repairs. He sent workmen to do the work.

"You don't know if the work done was legally done?" asked Ewig.

"I suppose it was. If it was not legal I certainly would not have done it," replied the witness.

He said he had always heard it was a town bridge, but he could not say whether the town had originally builtl it or not. The road on the north side of the creek was there in 1902 from the Van Etten place to the Wright place, but he could not say how long the road had existed. The Wright property is now unoccupied. He said he had never been on the Van Etten property.

"Never went fishing up Stony Cabin Creek?" asked Ewig.

"No", was the reply. "Why?" asked counsel.

"Well I could not get away if I went", was the reply.

The 1928 flood had come through his property and in his house the witness said. A shovel was then put in Sundown creek and the old channel, opened to keep the water in the original channel and away from his house and property. He said he did not ask anyone to do it, everyone worked to turn the stream back to its channel.

Lands Beyond.

Mr. Flemming asked the witness if there were other lands beyond the Wright place and he said there were.

Witness said he had always heard the Van Etten bridge was a town bridge, built by the town and while he was in office he took care of it at town expense.

Mr. Ewig asked whether the work down in the creek near his home had not protected his property and he said it had kept the water off. Work was done above as well as below the bridge.

By Mr. Flemming. "And it protected the highways too?" and the reply was yes.

Then Sherman Gockel was called. He said he had lived there for 25 years, his place was 1½ miles above the Brooks place. It was 2½ miles to the Van Etten place by road and 1½ miles across. He said he had worked on the Peekamoose road under the town superintendent during the last 23 years or so. He said he had done work on the north side of the road at the Van Etten bridge about 23 years ago and the town paid. In 1928 the bridge at the Van Etten place was taken away by flood. The town superintendent, John Coddington, put in a temporary structure. He did not work on the temporary bridge but did work on the new bridge and was paid by the county.

He said he and four others in October, 1928, did made a demand on the county superintendent to build bridges. Ewig objected, overcarried, 24 to 7. He said the paper was not exactly a demand but a request that bridges be built where needed. He said he knew John J. Coddington's signature as well as George W. Brooks. He did not know the signature of Grant Brooks.

Cross-examined he said he had been justice of the peace four years and had worked on roads during those years.

"You were drawing two salaries from the town of Denning?" asked Ewig.

"I would not call them that," replied the witness with a disgusted smile.

About 20 or 25 years ago he said he worked at the Van Etten bridge. John Coddington was owner of the property now owned by Van Etten, and he was also town superintendent of highways.

In his opinion John J. Coddington was town superintendent in 1928, and the town paid for the temporary bridge at the Van Etten bridge site. He said he thought the paper offered by Mr. Flemming asking for bridge construction by the county had been signed before the temporary bridge was built.

In reply to a question by Mr. Flemming the witness said that in the petition presented he had intended to convey the idea that all bridges in the town 25 feet or more which were on public highways and had been in use for 20 years or more should be constructed under the law by the county.

George W. Brooks of Ellenville was called. He lived in Denning until three years ago. He lived on the north side of the Rondout on the mountain above the Van Etten place for 70 years. He said he used the Peekamoose road and did not use the Van Etten bridge. The bridge he said had been there for at least 20 years. About 20 years ago he had helped scrape the road. He had a team on the scraper on the south side of the creek, that was the Peekamoose road. At that time the bridge was a wooden one. He recalled the Wright residence but did not remember the road on the north side of the Rondout over the Van Etten property. He never was up there much. He identified his signature on the petition.

The Van Etten place he said had been owned by Capt. Griswold, later Coddington, then Judge John G. Van Etten and now Lawrence Van Etten.

Brooks Testifies

Grant Brooks was sworn. He had lived at Sundown 68 years and is a farmer near the post office. In 1896 and 1897 he was collector of the town. At that time J. J. Coddington was on the present Van Etten place. In 1928 he worked on the road on the Sundown creek bridge at the Brooks place. He said the water had driven him out of his own house on the Eureka-Peekamoose road in August, 1928. The work done on the creek was with a shovel to put the creek back in its channel. He said he saw them put in a dock and shovel out the bed of the creek to put the East Branch of the Sundown creek back in its bed. The Sundown bridge he said was about ⅛ mile above him on the Rondout. This bridge across the Rondout is an iron bridge on stone abutments.

Cross examined he said he signed the paper requesting the bridges be built by the county. He said he believed the Van Etten bridge was one which should be a county bridge. He said he knew of the road across the bridge and to the right up north. He remembered the big time when they got the road. He said he had signed the paper on his knowledge of the condition there 20 years ago. He did not know the present condition of the road on the north of the creek to the Wright place.

He said there had been a bridge at the Van Etten place over 20 years. He remembered the fuss about laying out the road on the north of the creek to the Wright place. Capt. Griswold did not want them to run a road through the flats and he put them over along the creek.

John J. Coddington of Sundown called. He had served two terms as town superintendent of highways since 1919. He is not the John Coddington who formerly owned the Van Etten place. They were third cousins.

He too signed the petition for the construction of bridges by the county.

Five men signed the paper asking for four bridges in the town at county cost. He said while he was town superintendent he had had the road worked leading to the Van Etten place. He had worked on the road before he was town superintendent and been paid. Andrew George was town superintendent, he thought, when he placed guard rails along the road. He said as town superintendent of highways he also might have put on a few planks on the Van Etten bridge.

The road to the north of the creek he did not work. He used to put a scraper on the road leading across the Van Etten bridge and his custom was to pass through the gate and on the Van Etten bridge and go over to the barn and turn around. Outside the gate was public property. He recalled the road on the north of the creek to the Wright place.

The paper was then offered and accepted.

At that point Supervisor Finch moved for adjournment.

"You are out of order" replied the chairman. He explained that counsel had agreed on a time to stop. Consideration of counsel he said had to be heeded.

Mr. Finch said that notwithstanding the ruling of the chairman he did not think he was out of order with his motion to adjourn and moved they adjourn to 1:30. He said he did not wish to inconvenience the attorneys but he too had business to attend to. He thought he was in order and his motion prevailed and a recess was taken. Mr. Finch said he had an appointment too to be considered.

Sleepy In Daytime? It's Primordial

Man User To Be Quite A Cat-Napper In The Dim, Dim Past

By F. E. COLTON.

(Associated Press Science Writer.)

Washington (AP)—It isn't natural for humans to sleep all night. That's the latest finding of scientific sleep studies and new comfort, incidentally, for youngsters who hate to go to bed early and night-life devotees who like to come in with the milkman.

If the human race followed its instincts, people would catch half a dozen brief naps through the day and night instead of concentrating their daily slumber in one eight-hour stretch. Should man's primordial sleep habits ever reassert themselves from out of the dim past, the world's work might cease several times through the 24 hours while everybody took a cat-nap.

Long Sleep Just Habit.

The night-long sleep, with 16 hours of uninterrupted wakefulness in between, is just a habit man has picked up since he gained greater brain power, says a summary of sleep studies just published by the National Research Council. And, although the habit seems firmly rooted, it really wouldn't be so difficult for man to slip back into the old cat-nap pattern of sleep followed by the lower animals, the scientists say.

It requires brains to sleep as humans do, the research shows. If the cortex, or gray matter of a man's brain, were removed, he probably would be unable to sleep a solid eight hours.

GENTLEMEN! GENTLEMEN!
BUSINESS CONFERENCE

Do you nap in the daytime? Hate to go to bed at conventional hours? Fall asleep when custom says you should be awake? If so, you're following nature's intentions. Science says it isn't natural to get all your sleep in one eight-hour stretch.

This has been shown by experiments with dogs. Normal dogs have enough gray matter to learn and follow the habit of sleeping all night and staying awake all day. But dogs with the gray matter of their brains removed lose the habit and have half a dozen periods of sleep through the day.

It explains why new-born babies sleep at intervals and then awaken. A young baby's higher brain centers are not yet "wired up" to the rest of its nervous system, so it acts like an animal without gray matter in its sleep habits.

The president called on several of the members to say a few words, among whom were Charles Parsell, J. J. Tubby, Sr., L. E. Dunne, Fred. Lemister, Charles Snyder and Anton Kodetik. Murder at MOCKING HOUSE
BY WALTER C. BROWN

"Take nothing for granted—remove no one from your list of suspects! NO ONE!"

Pierre Dufresne's terrified warning sounded in Sergeant Harper's ears as he plunged from one mystery into another—deeper, more deadly.

For from then on, tragic intrigue marked a trail through the snow and into the ancient Dufresne mansion, where ghostly candle light flickered on a deathly scene....

How could anyone doubt that the two men there had killed each other and that one of them—disguised as Dufresne—was the crank who had been writing threatening letters to him?

But Harper's hunch is different.... He tugs at the threads of mystery and weaves them into a net to trap the killer. His spotlight of suspicion falls in turn on lovely Sylvia Dufresne—"a very clever and beautiful woman," her husband had said—high-strung Aline Croyden, her sister; Andrews, the old butler, the chauffeur and the other servants. Bit by bit, out of the lurking shadows of the old house, emerge the motives in the drama. And, finally, the solution.

Kingston Wins 31-0 In DUSO Opener Against Ellenville

If the baseball game held at the Fair Grounds Saturday afternoon between Kingston High and Ellenville High, were a foreshadowing of the way Kingston will play in the rest of the DUSO campaign, Kingston would have its third DUSO championship in one year all settled, as in this seven inning game Kingston played scoreless ball, used three pitchers who allowed Ellenville only three hits and in six innings at bat drove in 31 runs to blank Ellenville 31-0.

Ellenville was as bad as Kingston was good. She made 12 errors, all of them very costly and a great majority of them inexcusable. Dropping flys that were already in their gloves, wild throws to the basemen, erratic fielding, and a bombardment of their pitcher for 25 hits all helped Kingston get its first DUSO victory on a silver platter.

Much credit for the victory however should go to Kingston's pitching staff. Coach Kias used Martin, Bock and Toffel, in this game, and each one handed in very creditable performances. Captain Jim Martin, veteran southpaw, started the game and remained in the box for the first three innings. He turned in the best performance of the day fanning six men, and allowing one hit besides hitting one of the two triples of the afternoon. Emil Bock, Kingston's bespectacled right hander, then took up the assignment for the next two innings and pitched good ball, walking one man and allowing no hits. Ben Toffel finished the last two innings in the box, striking out one and allowing two hits.

Inning by Inning

In the first inning, Smith of Ellenville hit a single for the first of Ellenville's three hits. Smith was caught off first by a throw from Zadany to Linden who put him out. Van Wagnen, next up for Ellenville, struck out and was followed in the batting order by Evans who grounded to Moore and was put out at first by a toss from Moore to Linden.

In the start of the first, Kingston's first time at bat, Murphy singled, Moore sacrificed, and Linden reached first on an error of the third baseman, who missed his high fly. Linden was followed by Zadany, who reached first on an error of Ellenville's right fielder and brought in Murphy for the first run. Linden was put out at third by a throw from the right fielder. Martin then grounded to first and was put out retiring the side.

In Ellenville's part of the second, Martin struck out Sprague, Jagowsky and LeRoy, all in succession.

In the last of the second, DeCicco singled. Hopper reached first on an error, Tiano singled bringing in DeCicco for run No. 2 and Harder walked, loading the bases. At this point, Murphy grounded to third which brought Hopper home and put Tiano out. Moore then singled to third which put Harder out at third. Following this, Linden singled bringing in Murphy. Zadany singled bringing home Moore. This was followed by Martin's triple which brought in Linden and Zadany for runs No. 6 and 7. Following this DeCicco singled bringing in Martin. Hopper doubled bringing in DeCicco and Tiano grounded to third and was put out at first.

In the beginning of the third, Kingston again made quick work of Ellenville, Martin fanning Rider and Agins and Harder catching Spadaro's long fly to centerfield.

In the last of the third Harder singled. Murphy singled and went to second on an error of the catcher and then stole third. Harder went home. Following this, Moore singled, Linden singled bringing home Murphy. Zadany grounded to short, who put Linden out at second. Following this Martin was hit by the pitcher and went to first. DeCicco singled and went to third on the error of the centerfielder. Moore, Zadany and Martin ran home for runs No. 14, 15 and 16. Following this Hopper singled bringing DeCicco home. Tiano hit to the third baseman, Murphy doubled bringing home Harder. Moore doubled bringing home Murphy and Linden popped to the third baseman for out No. 3.

In the beginning of the fourth with Ellenville at bat, Smith was put out by DeCicco to Linden. Van Wagnen was put out by Bock to Linden and Evans went out, Bock to Linden.

In the last of the fourth, Zadany walked. Maines walked. Debrosky went to first on an error of the third baseman. Emil Bock singled bringing home Zadany. Wood singled bringing home Maines and Debrosky. Ortale grounded to the pitcher, who threw it to second to put Wood out. Charley Bock singled bringing in Bock and Ortale. This was followed by a triple by Don Moore which brought Charley Bock home for run No. 24. This was followed by a fly by Linden to the shortstop.

In the beginning of the fifth, Sprague hit to Moore. Jagowsky walked. LeRoy went out to Zadany and Rider grounded to Moore, who threw to first to put him out.

In the last of the fifth, Zadany struck out. Maines hit to the pitcher and Debrosky flied to center field ending the inning.

In the sixth with Ellenville at bat, Schleiffer singled. Spadaro struck out, Smith grounded to third, was put out at first, and Van Wagnen flied to Charley Bock for out No. 3.

In the last of the sixth, Emil Bock doubled. Wood reached first on an error of the left fielder bringing Bock home. Ortale hit to the first baseman. Charley Bock struck out. Moore singled bringing home Wood. Toffel singled. Zadany doubled bringing in Moore and Toffel. Maines singled bringing in Zadany. Debrosky singled bringing in Maines, and Emil Bock singled to bring in Debrosky for run No. 31. This was followed by a strikeout by Wood.

In the last inning, Evans was put out at first by Toffel to Linden. Sprague grounded to second and was put out at first. Jagowsky singled and LeRoy grounded to Debrosky, who threw to Linden for the put-out, which ended the game.

Sidelines

Ellenville must have had only one pitcher as Evans, who started, finished even though he was bombarded for 25 hits.

Coach Kias used so many men and Kingston scored so many runs that the scorekeepers had a hard job keeping the scorebooks straight.

Kingston's only bad inning was the sixth when she failed to bring in any runs. She scored runs in every other inning.

Moore and Zadany were the only Kingston players to play throughout the game.

After the game, Captain Jim Martin of Kingston remarked that he used only a straight ball and never used his curve once. If he can strike out six men in three innings using a straight ball, we wonder what will happen when he uses his curve.

Next Saturday, Kingston plays its second DUSO game against Middletown at the Fair Grounds.

Senecas Play Tie With Schwab's Relics

The Kingston Senecas, writes the publicity agent for that club, swung into action Sunday by playing a 3-3 tie with Willie Schwab's Relics, composed of the leading players of the city.

Fine fielding and hitting were displayed by both clubs.

The Seneca battery was Walt Debrosky and "Moose" Tiano. The rest of the lineup was Proctor, 1b; Lamb, 2b; Turk, 3b; Purvis, ss; Steart, lf; Keator, cf; T. Debrosky, rf.

For the relics Jimmy Doyle and Gene Ryder did the battery work. Some of the other well known players were Schwab, Robins, Dawkins, Sickler and Cragan.

After the short five inning game, Manager M. Debrosky ordered the Senecas through a stiff practice in order to have the boys in good shape for May 6 when they stack up against the U. P. A. in the Downtown Twilight League. May 13 the Indians will play at Wallkill Prison and on the 20th travel to Highland Mills.

BOXING PROGRAM NOT SO ATTRACTIVE THIS WEEK

New York, April 23 (AP)—It's a dull week in the boxing business when Maxey Rosenbloom doesn't fight at least once. And the world's light heavyweight champion isn't ready for a rest just yet.

He will meet Al Gainer, clever Connecticut 175-pounder, in a ten-round non-title bout at New Haven tonight. Otherwise the national boxing schedule for the week is almost a total loss except for an attempted come-back by Pete Latzo, former welterweight champion. Now a middleweight, Pete will clash with Billy Ketchell of Millville, N. J., in a ten rounder at Philadelphia Friday.

Freeman Ready For Karolak, Thinks He'll Win Tuesday

Belting away at Smoke Watkins, local colored giant, for the past two weeks, Big Bill Freeman, former heavyweight champion of the New York State National Guard, is ready for his fistic duel with Eddie Karolak of Albany, Tuesday night at the Kingston Municipal Auditorium.

These two heavies are down for the eight round semi-final on the card of bouts for the benefit of the American Legion Welfare Fund, are looked upon as two of the scrappers to do much toward making the bill of fisticuffs one that will be enjoyed by those who attend, seeking action and lots of hard punching.

Freeman has never been defeated in Kingston and counts on keeping his record clean. "I'm in good shape said the 24-year-old negro yesterday and I think I can lick Karolak regardless of what people say. Some think he's too clever. I've seen those guys before. Others say I'm all washed up because of my age. I'm only 24 and my old punch is still there in that right soupbone. I'll beat him wait'll you see."

To Bill's statement that he still can punch, Smoke Watkins will stand up and swear. "Boy that man sure can hit, and don't I know it. I wouldn't want to be in there with him in a real fight," said Watkins in speaking of the ex-champ's training.

The feature promises lots of action. In this skirmish Chester Matan, former sparmate of Max Schmelling, and Lou Poster, a "comer," according to the experts, will square off for 10 rounds or less.

The rest of the card:

Joe Vosdick, Saugerties, vs. Cecil Flowers, Atlanta, Go.

Tony Roddiguez, Kingston, vs. Willie Gold, Brooklyn.

"Gipsy" Joe Rivers vs. Joe Torini, New York.

Weighing in ceremonies will be held Tuesday at 3 p. m. under the supervision of Perry Walsh, Poughkeepsie sportsman, who is a member of the boxing commission.

Officials for the scrape will be Bill Singer, referee; Jack Finerty and Joe Kellly, judges; Mort Finch, timer; Sam Riber, announcer; Dr. L. E. Sanford, club physician.

No smoking will be allowed during the bouts, which should be a comfort to those who hate to look through a cloudy atmosphere at the scraps and to the boxers who find it hard to breath and give their best in a smoke-filled arena.

Hayes, Von Reedon In Feather Tourney

Eight featherweights will meet this week in the State Athletic Commission tournament to name a successor to Kid Chocolate, two boxers well known in Kingston fans being among the field looking for the title.

Three of the bouts, each for ten rounds, are down for tonight at the Lenox A. C., New York city. Jackie Wilson of Worcester, Mass., vs. Johnny Hinds, New York, and Andy Martin, Boston vs. Charley Von Reedon, Washington, D. C.

Tuesday night Petey Hayes of Saugerties and New York will clash with Johnny Farr of Cleveland at the St. Nicholas Arena, New York. The winner of this bout will meet Mike Belloise at the Garden, May 11.

Charley Von Reedon, who boxed on cards of the 156th Field Artillery at the old armory here, and Petey Hayes are the two boys about whom local fans will be anxious.

SPORT SLANTS

By ALAN J. GOULD

(Associated Press Sports Editor.)

Talk of any old-time follower of the foot-racers and he will spot you the lovelocks, the Cunninghams and the Bonthrons, then take Lon Myers for any and all chores to be done on the cinderpaths.

In other words, you can't convince most of the graybeards of the sport that the runner has yet come along who could match the great Myers with any degree of consistency from 100 yards to one mile.

Granted, of course, that a Simpson, a Paddock, a Wykoff or a Metcalfe could outsprint Myers; that Little Bill Carr could beat him at the quarter-mile, or that Big Ben Eastman, Ted Meredith, and Douglas Lowe could outstep him over the 880.

"It would take a combination of these young fellows with Cunningham or Bonthron thrown in, to hold Myers day in and out, at any of the distances specified," concludes your old-timer.

Some of Myers' Times.

This may all seem like the use of rose-colored glasses to those of us who have watched the sensational track performances of the last few years, but there are still many competent observers who refuse to concede, for example, that any of our current crop of record-breaking milers is the superior of John Paul Jones, and there is fresh evidence to support the all-around prowess of Myers, who was the kingpin back in the early 80's.

Myers turned pro after winning a flock of A. A. U. championships and, according to J. B. White, an old-time sprinter, turned in times of 47.5 for the 440, 1:52 for the 880 and 4:15 for the mile. All these marks were b etter than the amateur records of his time.

"Shortly after his return from Australia," relates another veteran, Hugh Baxter, "Myers told me he ran 300 yards against a slight wind in 30.6 seconds and an hour afterward turned and ran the same distance with the wind in 29.8 seconds."

The present world record for 300 yards is 30.6 seconds, held jointly by Bernie Wefers, the old Georgetown star, and Guy Butler of England. So it would seem that Myers could travel when he felt like it.

Three Moderns Handicapped.

It is unfortunate that injuries have cut short the careers of three of the greatest foot-racers developed since the war.

Carr, the Olympic 400-meter champion, broke both legs in an auto accident and is through with athletics. His California rival, Eastman, went lame last year, and has been unable to regain anything like his record-breaking form of 1931-32.

Now Lovelock, less than a year after his record-smashing 4:07.6 mile at Princeton, may be handicapped indefinitely by an injured knee. The New Zealander has been running for Oxford again this spring but showing little of his rare 1933 form, although he hopes to be sufficiently improved to give his American rival, Bill Bonthron, a contest when they meet in England this summer.

North Rondouters Show Well in Drill

Manager Jimmy DeCicco, of the North Rondout Social Club, today stated he was well pleased with the drill his boys went through Sunday at Hasbrouck Park, explaining that they showed good hitting, fielding and base running in the practice.

Among those who took part in the drill were Phil Komosa, captain; Ernie Mitchell, Joe Gardner, Joe Brown, Ray Raskoski, Tom Briodi, Al Long, "Millie" Briodi, Leo Tessio and Louis Nard.

Joe Werner, ex-pugilist, took a turn at shortstop after 15 years of participation in the leather slinging game and said he rather preferred baseball to boxing.

With The Walker Cuppers— Moreland

Dallas Star, 23, Has Blazed Bright Trail In Southwest

Editor's Note: This is the fourth of a series of articles on the careers and personalities of the eight members of America's 1934 Walker cup golf team which meets the British at St. Andrews May 11-12.

By BILL PARKER

(Associated Press Sports Writer)

Dallas, Tex. (AP)—Gus moreland, 23-year-old Dallas links star, got a surprise on the eve of his departure for New York to sail with other members of the 1934 United States Walker cup team when a sports writer showed him a complete record of the tournaments he had won since he started his phenomenal career in 1927.

There were 26 in all, including several important championships within the last three years, and in addition he had been runner-up in five others.

"I don't know how it was possible for me to win that many events," said Moreland, "but if the record shows it, I guess it must be so.

"Honestly, I didn't know exactly how many I had won, but I never dreamed it was that many."

Turns in Auto For "Tin"

Moreland, the nervelous Texan named to the Walker cup squad for the second consecutive time, has a room full of trophies which he calls "hardware" and "tin." For winning the Trans-Mississippi title at Oklahoma City in 1932 he was given an expensive automobile, but the United States Golf Association frowned on the gift. Gus took the car back and received another piece of "tin" in exchange.

The youthful star's first tournament victory was in the Texas interscholastic league in 1927, and next year he added the Dallas Country Club invitation meet. He won seven Texas tourneys the next two seasons, and in 1931 "arrived" in a big way.

Wielding his trusty old No. 66 mashie-niblick with deadly effectiveness, he won eight consecutive tournaments, including the Texas amateur, and qualified for the National amateur.

The next year he finished in a tie with Gene Sarazen for second place in the Texas open, retained his Texas amateur title, won the Trans-Mississippi crown and the Western amateur, and was notified of his selection on the Walker cup team—the realization of his biggest golf dream. He qualified for the National amateur but lasted only until the second round.

Great Gallery Favorite

Last season Moreland kept his Texas amateur and Trans-Mississippi crowns, but lost his Western amateur title. He kept the Houston Country Club invitation title for the third consecutive year and added the New Orleans invitation. In the National open he finished in a tie for sixth place with 295.

Moreland started his 1934 campaign by leading the amateurs in the Texas open with 285, three strokes behind Wiffy Cox, the winner.

Rated one of the coolest and most consistent putters in the country, Moreland has the golfing nerve to try anything and an ideal competitive temperament. He is a tremendous gallery favorite because he is always shooting for angles and birdies.

He has expressed confidence that he would win his Walker cup matches, and hopes to remain in England for the British amateur.

Emerick Loses Hudson Valley Bowling Title

The Hudson Valley singles bowling title was won Sunday night in Poughkeepsie by Freddie Dahn, whose final score of 2,922 pins led the runner-up, Homer Emerick, by eight. Perrino, another player seeking the title, scored 2,817. A foul in the second game is said to have lost for Emerick, who would have won by one pin.

At the Middletown games Saturday Emerick bowled beautifully, trimmed Perrino and overcame Dahn's huge lead; his total was 1,[illegible]. Emerick had a high single of 234 and four scores more than 200, two splits and a miss holding his other game to 190. Dahn never got started. Perrino totaled 998.

The scores:

At Middletown

Emerick	209	190	235	211	212	[illegible]

By HUGH S. FULLERTON, JR.

(Associated Press Sports Writer)

Those who predicted the Chicago Cubs would have to rely upon their tremendous slugging power to get into the National League pennant race evidently overlooked Lonny Warneke, the tall right hander from Mt. Ida, Ark.

He has pitched two games so far this season, won them both and allowed just two hits, one each to Cincinnati and St. Louis.

Following up his opening day performance against the Reds, Warneke turned in the same feat against the Cardinals yesterday as the Cubs won the weirdest kind of game by a 15 to 2 score. The only blow allowed was a double by Jim Collins in the fifth which led to the two St. Louis runs. It followed a walk to Spud Davis; then a passed ball let Davis score and Collins reach third. The Ripper tallied after Gene Moore's fly. Meanwhile the Cubs rapped the brothers Dean, Dizzy and Paul, and Jim Winford and Clarence Heise, for 22 hits including Chuck Klein's three homer and one by Gabby Hartnett.

Giants Lose

The victory gave the Cubs the league lead as the champion Giants suffered their season's first setback at the hands of the Braves. The score was 6-5 as Boston rapped Freddy Fitzsimmons freely and held onto its early lead even after Homer Peel hit a pinch homer in the ninth.

The Brooklyn Dodgers handed the Phillies their sixth straight defeat, 7 to 5, collecting their winning runs on a four-run outburst against George Darrow in the eighth. The Pirates nosed out Cincinnati 5-4 in the other National League contest.

American Draws Crowds

A crowd, rather than any particular game, furnished the American League feature. The Boston Red Sox, who have been gunning for attendance records ever since the season started, drew a paid attendance of 44,631 to Fenway Park to see them take an 8 to 1 licking from the Yankees and Lefty Gomez. Some 6,000 more were turned away as the Sox had reached a new mark of 145,000 for six home games.

The champion Washington Senators finally found a flinger who could go the route and defeated the Athletics 4 to 3 behind Al Thomas. The first Sunday game in Philadelphia drew a 20,000 crowd, which saw Thomas outpitch Roy Mahaffey.

Fine relief hurling by Buck Newsom, who granted only two hits in 6 2-3 innings, helped the Browns beat the White Sox 6 to 5.

The Detroit-Cleveland contest was halted by rain.

Kingston High First Six Times, But Loses to N. Y. M. A., 51-44

Saturday afternoon the Kingston High School track team participated in and lost its first track meet of the season to the track team of New York Military Academy, 51-44, although she took six firsts to N. Y. M. A.'s five.

The relay race, which was the last race on the program and was won by N. Y. M. A., decided the meet. Before this relay race Kingston trailed N. Y. M. A. by 2 points and if she had won it, Kingston would have won the meet.

One of the most interesting races of the day was the half mile. In this race Joe Kalish of Kingston set a fast steady pace and led the pack until only a few yards from the finish. Meanwhile, Gibson, Kingston freshman flash, who was in back until the last quarter, kept gaining steadily and when only a few yards from the finish, sprinted past his teammate Kalish, to take first place in 2:19.

The pole vault was easily won by Kingston, being stopped at 8' 3" because of N. Y. M. A.'s inability to jump any higher. Davis and Goffredi of Kingston tied for first place.

The next meet will be held at Poughkeepsie with Poughkeepsie High Saturday, May 5.

The events in the order they were held with the winners of the first three places in each event and their time or distances are as follows:

Shields Wins From Grant In Five Sets

White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., April 23 (AP)—He didn't win but the hero of the 14th annual Mason and Dixon tennis tournament was Bryan M. Grant, Jr., pint-sized package of Dixie dynamite.

The nimble Atlantan, five feet three inches tall and weighing only 120 pounds, accomplished the downfall of the biggest man in the tournament, six feet four inch Lester Stoefen, and came within a few points of beating the second biggest competitor, six feet three inch Frank Shields, in the final round yesterday.

He couldn't quite make the grade against Shields and the country's No. 1 ranking player emerged the winner after five sets, 2-6, 1-6, 6-3, 8-6, 6-4.

Wilmer Allison and George Lott, probably American Davis Cup doubles combination, defeated Shields and Stoefen, 7-5, 6-4, 6-4, 6-3 in the men's doubles finals.

Jane Sharp of Pasadena, Calif., the women's singles winner, also shared in the women's and mixed doubles championships. She teamed with Stoefen to beat Berkeley Bell and Florence Leboutillier of New York, 6-2, 6-4, and with Norma Taubele of New York to defeat Katherine Winthrop of Oston and Miss Leboutillier, 6-2, 5-7.

Schryvers Edge Out Kaslich Nine by 7-6

The Kaslich A. C. gave the Schryver All Stars a close rub at the Fair Grounds Sunday afternoon in a practice game which ended in favor of Kingston's representatives in semi-pro ball, 7-6, on the strength of Ted Fraleigh's home run and nice relief pitching by Walt Black.

Ted Fraleigh started for Schryvers and ran into a couple of bad innings due to not being in good condition yet. Black relieved him, displaying lots of stuff for the first time he went to the mound in two years as the result of injuries received in an accident that long ago.

Fraleigh made up for his failure on the mound by poling out a neat homer that helped the Schryvers come through for victory.

INTERCOLLEGIATE GAMES SCHEDULED THIS WEEK

New York, April 23 (AP)—Columbia's Lions entered a crucial week in their campaign to retain the Eastern Intercollegiate Baseball League championship today.

Already beaten once by Penn's "dark horse" nine, the Lions find the schedule operating against them. They must play a pair of double-headers, the first against Harvard at Cambridge tomorrow and the second against Cornell at Ithaca on Saturday.

Double-bills are ruinous to most college teams because there aren't enough effective pitchers to go around. One twirling ace per team is the rule.

Harvard's only league start resulted in a tie game with Princeton last week but the Crimson has the strength to make Columbia plenty of trouble. Cornell, with an even break against Princeton in its first two contests, also may be dangerous.

The big game of the week, however, will send Penn, winner over both Columbia and Yale in its first two starts, against the Elis at New Haven on Saturday. This battle will give George Parker, Yale captain, a chance to avenge the 1-0 beating he took from the Quakers at Philadelphia Saturday although he allowed only four hits.

English When Employed by Genius Wins Reader

Those who do not understand the shades of meaning in stunning words, great and small, naturally don't see anything in the coruscations and scintillations of English in the hands of an artist, observes a columnist in the St. Louis Globe-Democrat. It is as if one couldn't find any thrills in Beethoven or Mozart or Wagner. It is just too bad they don't know what they miss. Study of a huge unabridged dictionary—of eight or ten volumes—should reveal to them the wealth piled up for the use of the men of ideas and inspire an appreciation of it. Even people with no extraordinary ideas get along famously by the use of this vast vocabulary.

Those who speak and understand English are no longer content with plain matter of fact words. They demand that the structure reared by the writer shall sparkle and glitter like the Peacock throne of Persia. An essay can't be couched in the verbiage of Montaigne or Bacon or Hazlitt, plain and to the point. It must have many flashing facets like Emerson's or Ruskin's or Maeterlinck's; or James Russell Lowell's and Oliver Wendell Holmes; and every popular writer of reflective disquisitions on any subject exhibits this luminosity of wit in greater or less degree. These essayists must soar in the literary empyrean, with wings outspread, diffusing a kind of glory over all they say. Their mission may not be so much one of guidance as to inspire an influx of emotion or sensation.

Children Excel in Touch, Adults in Hearing, Sight

Children between five and seven years old have a superior sense of touch to adults, but they do not hear so well, nor are their eyes suitable for close work.

This is one of the points in a report on education, which emphasizes the importance of proper nursery schools, the London Daily Sketch says.

The report frowns on too much "phantasy" or "make-believe." "Their fancy," it says, "should not be overstimulated and should be brought increasingly into contact with the universe of fact by encouraging them to follow their developing interests among real things."

With regard to training at the nursery stage, its aim was not so much to implant the knowledge and the habits which civilized adults considered useful as to aid and supplement the growth of the normal child.

The child should be allowed to learn the three R's when he wants to do so, whether he be three or six years old.

The need for medical supervision, education and training of children below the age of five is considered a pressing one, while the opinion is expressed that the nursery schools for children from the age of two onward were desirable.

Musical Sea Water

Science has cleared up the mystery of the musical sea waters off the English coasts, says Popular Mechanics Magazine. For ages fishermen have steered their craft in the vicinity of the perilous shores in fogs by listening to the "sound" of the water. Through long experience these men could tell their exact position in proximity to reefs and rocks, as well as the safety of deep water, by listening to the various sounds coming from the depths. It has been found that this "music" is caused by various ocean currents scraping different kinds of sea bottom. The metallic sounds coming from certain quarters are said to be due to currents striking submerged rocks, ringing them like a bell. Every bay and headland and strait has its own note, which fishermen learn in time and recognize even in time of dense fog. These notes serve as guides for the small craft in thick weather.

Sea-Going Superstitions

Hares, pigs, cats, and sometimes horses, dogs and spiders are held by sea-going men to bring bad luck if taken aboard ship, says Gas Logic. Even to mention a four-footed animal while at sea is considered a bad omen by Scottish and English sailors, according to the writer.

Chinese, Egyptians and Persians Loved Flowers

China shows the earliest record of the use of plants and flowers for decoration. Flowers and religion are closely united in all their early history, so the Chinese used to offer flowers as presents to their gods and to the departed relatives they worshiped as part of their religion. The way these facts are determined is by the paintings on old tapestries, vases, and potteries which symbolized the actions of the people. The predominating flower in the early history was undoubtedly the peony, as it is found depicted on nearly all the works of art.

In Egypt also, the history of flowers was closely bound to that of religion, for here, too, the people placed flowers on the altars and made certain flowers sacred to certain deities. The part that plants played is learned more easily than from Chinese history because the Egyptians clearly depicted their thoughts.

Although the use of plants in Persia was largely influenced by the Chinese and Egyptians, the Persians still maintained a distinct character. The hanging gardens of Babylon may have constituted the most famous piece of landscape work of ancient times; this so-called wonder of the world was accomplished by terracing a steep hillside; the ultimate effect was that of many gardens hanging on the hillside. As Persia is a hot, sandy country, their decorative plantings had three main features in landscape design: water, trees, and grass. With them, flowers and color were relatively unimportant.

Police Teletype Locates Owner of Lost Gloves

Boston.—The police teletype has been turned into a lost and found department wire.

A pair of gloves, with the name J. Hrones inside, was found by a policeman in Connecticut. Perusing a newspaper, the officer noted that a man by that name played on the Massachusetts Institute of Technology hockey team.

By teletype, he asked Boston police to ascertain Hrones' address. The information was sent back by teletype, and Hrones is wearing his gloves once more.

Announce Cast Of "Hansel And Gretel"

JOHN GURNEY

The distinguished young American baritone, who will be heard as the "Father" in "Hansel and Gretel," to be given at the High School Auditorium on Friday at 3:15 p. m. under auspices of Kingston Federated Council of P.-T. A., is John Gurney.

Mr. Gurney received his musical education in New York and Paris. He has toured the country with the American Opera Company, playing leading baritone roles. He was for a year the leading baritone at the Roxy Theatre and toured America with "Roxy and his Gang." Last season Mr. Gurney appeared in concerts in over 100 cities throughout the east and middle west. He was born in Jamestown 31 years ago. He was educated at Oberlin College, majoring in physics and mathematics. His tremendous success in concert and opera places him among the ranks of America's great singers.

Miss Josephine Antine appeared for the first in opera, in "Martha", at the Juilliard School of Music in New York city. Last season she appeared in the revival of Handel's opera, "Xerxes", and in Cimaroso's "The Secret Marriage", which opened the chamber music festival in the library of congress, Washington, D. C., under direction of Albert Stoessal; also as soprano soloist in the "Messiah" at Carnegie Hall. Miss Antoine has had much success as an artist appearing with the Little Symphony over WOR. Upon one occasion she sang a song written by A. Walter Kremer for Lily Pons. She sings the roles of "The Dew Fairy" and "The Dawn Fairy" in Hansel and Gretel.

Marion Kalayjian presides over the piano and in the absence of the conductor, Rudolf Thomas, and European tour she will conduct and explain the production. She is a graduate of the Juilliard School of Music and was for three years a Fellowship pupil of the great pianist, Josef Theoinne, later studying in Paris with Isidor Phillipp. She won the Fontainebleau Premiere prize. She has had several extensive concert tours since returning to America.

"Y" Appeals for Aid Through Churches

Drive Leaders Say Number of Donors of Large Amounts Did not Appear This Year—Seek $5256 Subscriptions to Meet Budget.

An urgent appeal was made in the Kingston churches Sunday for support of the campaign to raise $15,000 for carrying on the work of the Y. M. C. A. this year. It was stated at the Y. M. C. A. this morning that the appeals had not been without effect and that they received a number of telephone calls from people who announced that they wished to double the subscriptions they had made.

An extra report supper was held at the Y. Saturday evening, when total subscriptions of $954 were reported for the day. This brought the total for the campaign, up to Saturday night, to $9,744, leaving $5,256 needed to meet the budget asked.

Comment was made on the fact that there are not the large subscriptions that in former years were given during the annual campaigns to raise funds, when subscriptions as high as $1,600 were received and in one case $5,000. The highest individual subscription so far this campaign is $250, and there is only one subscription for that amount. It was said that what is needed is a number of people who will give at least $400 or $500 each, if the campaign is to be a success and the work of the Y carried on.

The final report meeting will be held at the Y. M. C. A. at 6:26 this evening. It is stated at headquarters that the campaign will positively close at this time, whether the amount needed to carry on the work has been received or not.

At the report meeting Saturday evening the "Racketeers" division, Winne and Martin managers, led for the campaign, with a total of $1,308.

Of the 20 teams of workers, one, that captained by Theron Culver, has reached the team quota of $400. Following were the team scores based on reports up to Saturday night:
